ANTON KOENNECKE, German pilot, planning the Berlin to San Francisco non-stop flight, expects to make it in sixty hours, dropping letters in New York as he flies over.

San Francisco, possibly Washington also, will observe that such a flight would bring airships in a straight line from Asia to San Francisco.

IT WOULD pay the Pacific Coast States to prepare their own defense air fleets in view of government inactivity. A few bomb dropping planes could do damage costing more than all the world's air fleets, combined.

A FRENCHMAN, Doctor Calmette, has developed an anti-tuberculosis vaccine, so successful that its use for all children is suggested. There is no injection of tuberculosis germs. The vaccine merely "suggests" the disease, and rouses to activity the anti-tubercular bacilli in the body. The new remedy, called "BCG," was tried on monkeys and other animals for thirteen years in the Pasteur Institute before experiments were made on humans. "BCG" is said to reduce consumption in twenty-five cases out of twenty-six.

THE FAMOUS American doctor, William J. Mayo, believes that science will find a way to immunize against cancer. A woman, Dr. Maud Slye of Chicago, has bred mice in which cancer can by no means be developed, and other mice invariably born with cancer.

WHEN CONSUMPTION and cancer are conquered, as they will be, men will be rid of their most deadly microscopic enemies. They already know how to deal with the deadly plagues from Asia, one of which, "The Black Death," wiped out nearly half the population of Europe.

BRITISH AND JAPS, AT GENEVA, OPPOSE NAVAL CUT PROPOSALS OF U. S.

Geneva, June 20 (I.N.S.).—A proposal designed to eliminate all naval competition among the great powers was laid before the Geneva conference today by the American delegation.

The American program is that the 5—5—3 ratio of capital ship strength, established at the Washington Conference six years ago, be extended to cover all remaining classes of fighting craft.

In this connection, Hugh S. Gibson, chairman of the American delegation, informed his British and Japanese colleagues that the United States is willing to consider the abolition of all submarines if a world agreement to that effect can be negotiated.

France and Italy, however, refused to entertain such a proposal at the Washington Conference, and as they are not active participants in the present conference it is assumed that the abolition of submarines cannot be accomplished here.

SUSPECT IN BIG GEM THEFT TRAPPED IN BED

Surrounding a house on Broadway, near Shawmut avenue, today, a squad of officers forced their way into the building and arrested Jerome J. Miller of New York. Miller, who is twenty-five, was overpowered in bed.

Under the floor in a closet in the bedroom, the police say they uncovered $17,000 worth of diamonds and other jewelry, a part of the $25,000 loot secured in a safe-breaking job at the Penfield Jewelry Company, No. 357 Washington street, on the night of June 12.

After a grilling Miller, according to the police, confessed to the jewelry robbery and also to having cracked the safes of the Oriental Tea Company on India street and the Sarnoff-Irving Hat Company at No. 353 Washington street.

He used ynamite to open the safe in the office of the tea company while the other safes were opened with a sledge hammer and chisel.

It was the suspect's desire to own and drive an automobile that led to his capture. The police had secured a partial description of the man who blew open the safe at the tea company office.

For several days detectives saw a man being driven about town in a new car of expensive make, by a boy. The car was followed and the driver was questioned. From the information given by the driver the

POPE PLANNING MOVE TO END CHINESE CIVIL WAR

By GUGLIELMO EMANUEL,
International News Service Correspondent.

Rome, June 20.—Possible attempts by the Vatican to end the civil war in China were hinted at today by the Pope in an encyclical to the consistory now in session.

The Pope devoted most of the encyclical to the Chinese warfare and to praise of the churchmen in Mexico for their attitude in the religious controversy there. He also made references to the French Nationalists of the Action Francaise.

After deploring the horrors of the Chinese civil war, the Pope expressed the opinion that these horrors are due less to the Chinese people, whom he described as peace loving, than to "imported subversive doctrines.'

Reaffirming the Vatican's love and regard for the ancient nation of China, the Pope praised the missionaries and Christians for their faithful service in China, and intimated that he is now considering launching a peace appeal to end the warfare.

NEW CLEW IS FOUND IN SALISBURY SLAYING

Salisbury Beach, June 20.—While squads of police were running down clues at Newmarket and Manchester, N. The circulars which contain a detailed description of the suspect are being mailed to every city and town east of Chicago.

The search being conducted about Manchester for the alleged slayer is the result of a casual remark made last night by an unknown woman in front of the news stand of Philip

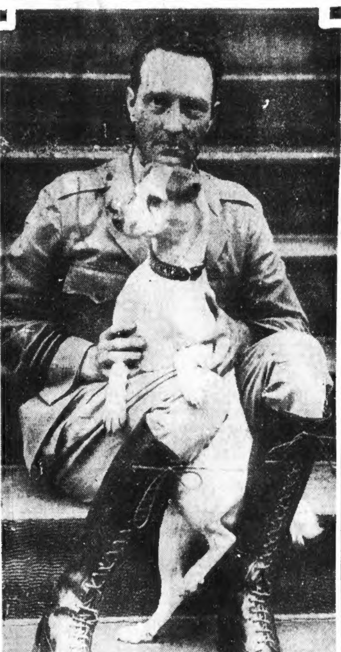
IT'S REAL 'BYRD' DOG



NORTH POLE FLIER AND "IGLOO"
Commander Byrd snapped by a Boston Evening American photographer today on the steps of his home, No. 9 Brimmer street, with his pet.

'DEVIL DIDN'T BRING ME' SAYS BILLY SUNDAY

Swinging his arms, jumping into the air, leaping from one side of the platform to the other, and performing those thousand and one gyrations that are his because he originated them, the Rev. Billy Sunday interested an audience of 3,500 in Tremont Temple for an hour, at noon today.

With all the fire, pep and slang at his command, the evangelist, who is on a flying trip to Boston from Bangor, Me., shouted at his audience that the devil didn't bring him to Boston.

"I don't give three whoops this side of Hoboken for the devil and I want you all to know it," he shouted.

OBJECTS TO TABLE.

"Get that thing out of here," Sunday shouted early in his sermon, as he ran against an unoffending table that some solicitous committeeman had placed on the platform

BYRD VISITS HOME HERE TO BID HIS 3 CHILDREN GOODBY BEFORE SEA HOP

New York, June 20.—The take-off of Commander Richard E. Byrd's plane "America" will be delayed at least another 24 hours by rain, wind and fog over the eastern Atlantic, it was announced today by Lieut. George O. Noville, navigator of the flight, at Roosevelt Field. Byrd had planned to start tomorrow.

On the eve of his planned transatlantic flight, Commander Richard E. Byrd, hero of the first North Pole exploration by air, came home to Boston today for a farewell to his three children and to accept an honorary degree from Tufts College.

Byrd said he plans to hop tomorrow morning "at break of dawn" if the weather report covering East to Ireland is favorable.

If the report is adverse, then the time will be set for 6 o'clock tomorrow afternoon. And if the weather is still bad at that hour, another twelve-hour gap will intervene—this plan of progression being followed until the weather man finally gives the signal.

Originally, Byrd said, he favored the 6 p. m. hour, because, although the dawn is believed to hold the best atmospheric condition for a take-off, the evening take-off would set the huge Fokker down in Paris in daylight.

Within twenty minutes after the aviator, dressed in the natty Summer uniform of the Navy airmen, reached the South Station today with Mrs. Byrd, there was a hue and a cry and a bedlam of shrieks and barking in a little white bedroom in Brimmer street.

The man who will hazard the fog and ice-choked aerial lines over the Atlantic in the interest of science and aeronautics was being pummeled by three joyous youngsters and was being nipped at and leaped

SCORE IMPERILED AS BARGES DRIFT IN GALE

The lives of a score of men aboard four drifting barges were in grave peril off Provincetown as an east-northeast gale drove the helpless barges steadily toward the shore this afternoon.

The entire crew of the Provincetown Coast Guard station gathered on the beach, their glasses trained on the drifting barges. The Coast Guardsmen had their boats ready to launch the moment the sea abated late this afternoon, but unless the wind died down or shifted they said they would be helpless and must then depend upon their ability to rescue the men after the barges crashed on the shore.

The barges broke from the tow of the Reading Railroad tug Gettysburg while off Highland light at Providence and the gale and high-running seas made it impossible for the tug to place lines aboard the drifting craft.

The keeper of the light first noticed the plight of the men aboard the barges. He notified the Coast Guard station and the crew and the life boats were immediately taken to the shore opposite the point where the barges are wallowing.

DOCTOR GETS $250,000 BLINDNESS VERDICT

New York, June 20 (A.P.).—Dr. Joseph G. Yocum of Watertown, N. Y., was awarded $250,000 damages by a verdict entered in Supreme court today for total blindness that resulted from an injury received in 1921 when struck by a bolt while he was a passenger in an I. R. T. subway train. He sued for a half-million.

Dr. Yocum was formerly a surgeon at the Skin and Cancer Hospital and the Presbyterian Hospital.

He testified he had had an income of $150,000 a year before the accident.

Mr. Jocum received degrees from Leland-Stanford, Columbia and Harvard universities. While at Harvard he was a crack quarter miler.

He served in the French, British and American armies in the World War and has been decorated for distinguished service by both the French and American governments. During the war he performed more than 3300 major operations upon soldiers.

WIFE SAYS 'FRIEND' OF MRS. VAIL WAS CRUEL

Guarded by two officers from Concord Reformatory, where he is serving a long term for larceny, Hyman I. Lederman, who some time ago claimed he had received a $250,000 gift from Mrs. Theodore A. Vail because of a kindness done her while he was a bellboy in a Boston hotel, heard his wife, Marie E. Lederman, accuse him of cruelty in the hearing of her divorce suit today in East Cambridge Court.

Taking the stand before Judge Arthur E. Bean, the 22-year-old wife related at the hands of her attorney, Mrs. Jennie Loitman-Barron, a long recital of alleged blows and kicks showered on her by her husband from the time of their marriage in December, 1925, until shortly before he was sent to Concord.

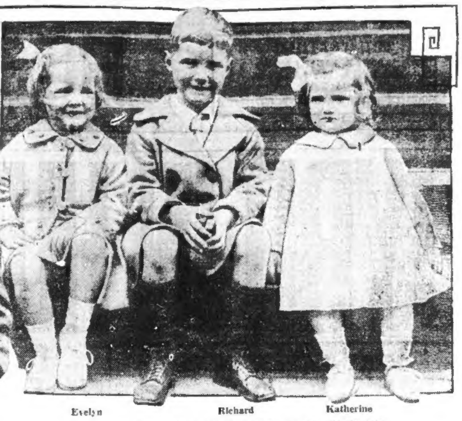
"I'LL MAKE PARIS IN 36 HOURS"
Commander Byrd tells Boston Evenin g American reporter that the real reason for his coming to Boston, besides t aking his degree, was to get a rest before the arduous trip. "The ideal tim e to start is evening," he said.



THEY WERE HUGGED AND KISSED
"Daddy" dashed madly up the stairs on arriving at his Brimmer street home to greet his beloved little ones. "Hello, Daddy, dear," they cried. "So glad to see you before you sail far away."

all over by Igloo, the children's pup.

Flying was forgotten, degrees were put out of mind, the army of reporters that have dogged his steps in various cities became only memories and the lines of fatigue and care impressed in the commander's face by the long weeks of preparation, with little sleep, smoothed out again.

REASONS FOR HIS VISIT.

"They are my reasons for coming to Boston," Commander Byrd declared later, "the youngsters and my receiving the degree Master of Science out of Tufts."

When all the excitement had died down, when Richard E. Byrd, 3d, who is just seven, had struggled into his clothes and when little Evelyn Bolling Byrd, 5, had draped hers after a fashion, and Katherine Ames Byrd, 3, had been buttoned and trimmed by the necessary aides, the Polar airman revealed the possibility of his hop-off tomorrow night, if the right weather is given him.

For this reason he was prepared to leave again for New York at 5 p. m., and would be back at the hangar at Roosevelt Field, Long Island, before midnight.

NO WOMAN TO GO.

Who the proposed fourth passenger on the ocean trip will be Commander Byrd declined to say.

It was his hundredth or more such statement since first came the rumor that a fourth person would make the flight with Byrd, his alternate pilot, Bert Acosta, and the navigator, Naval Lieutenant George Noville.

Byrd asserted, somewhat decisively, however, that if a fourth rider is aboard the big three-engined Fokker monoplane when it roars into the air with its nose pointed for Paris, the newcomer will not be a woman.

The commander still keeps his cheer and his patience in the presence of interviewers, although almost every turn he makes these days—and nights—brings him face to face with some inquisitive person carrying a pencil and a wad of paper.

When he and Mrs. Byrd arrived at the South Station, one interviewer rode with them in a taxi to Brimmer street, plying the flier with questions—and when the greetings with the children were over, another interviewer was satisfied even before Byrd had eaten breakfast.

IS EAGER TO START

"My real reason for coming to Boston, in addition to receiving the honorary degree of Master of Science from Tufts College," said Byrd, "is to see the children. But I am going back to New York this afternoon to be on the spot and ready to start as soon as I can."

"I am confident that I will make the New York-to-Paris flight in 36 hours, although, of course, weather conditions are going to play a large part in our time. Our present plans are to take a course just south of the Great Northern Circle, but again weather conditions may cause us to make changes.

The airman refused to confirm the report that the fourth passenger would be Lieutenant Bert Balchen. He also insisted the passenger would not be Rodman Wanamaker, but the passenger will be approved by Wanamaker.

"We will hop off on Tuesday if weather conditions are right," the air hero went on, "and if not on Tuesday then on Wednesday.

SEES SUCCESSFUL FLIGHT.

"Roosevelt Field is an idea place for the hop-off. The ground is firm and the rain has not softened it to any extent. The rains have simply gathered in little puddles, and the sun removes it in short time.

"My chief purpose, as I have said many times, is to find the safest and fastest airlane across the Atlantic."

At the Brimmer street house the first to greet Commander Byrd was Igloo, the dog that accompanied him and was his mascot on the polar flight.

"Igloo will not be with me this trip," said the aviator, as he gently pushed the eager, tail-wagging dog away from him, "but there is no need of a mascot. I know that the flight will be successful. The plane is right, the motors are right, and there can be no reason for failure."

Then there was a wild whoop from the top of the stairway and little Dickie Byrd, the aviator's 7-year-old son, slid down the banister into his father's arms.

With his son on one knee, the birdman resumed his talk of the flight.

"We have simply got to wait for the weather," he said. "I spent three hours yesterday in New York with the weather wizards and it is not at all certain that we will be able to hop off Tuesday night.

"My trip, of course, is to demonstrate the practicability of transatlantic flights with a three-engined plane. It is not a practical thing to make the trip in a one-engined plane, although that type has a greater cruising radius. Its element of safety is much smaller, however.

"You can readily see the difference between the one-engined and the three-engined planes. Should one engine go dead on a three-engined plane, you always have two to fall back on."

MAKING PLANES SAFE

The commander revealed that he gets an average of fifteen requests a day, probably half of them from women, for permission to accompany him on the trip. And he said he has received innumerable offers from individual editors and editors of syndicates for exclusive rights to his own story.

All these, he said, indicates that little doubt exists that he will accomplish the flight safely.

"Commercial flying has done much to make flying safer," he declared. "In ten years the transatlantic commercial planes will be as safe as an automobile. The plane today is not as safe as the auto under ordinary conditions, though under certain conditions it is safer."

Asked what his wife thought of his contemplated flight to Paris and if he would say goodbye finally to the children in Boston today, Byrd said:

WIFE TO "CHEER HIM ON."

"I never say goodbie. I say just 'So long.' Mrs. Byrd will be in New York with me when I get back there. She is a good sport. She knows that this is my life work and she is just as confident as I am.

"You know, of course, that my wife is a Boston girl, and the flight will be of as great interest to the folks of her home town as it will be to the folks in my own home town. I know that Boston folk are wishing us every success so I am glad to take this opportunity to send them my regards through the columns of the Boston Evening American. Tell them that I am absolutely confident of success."

Here the dainty Mrs. Byrd took up the thread of interview.

"I shall see my husband off," she said, "and then hurry direct from New York back home here, where our whole family will be able to get the reports of the flight while we are together. The children and I will cheer him on from home."

Best Regards to Wife's Home Town From Byrd

"I send my best regards to the people of Boston, my wife's home city, through the columns of the Boston Evening American," said Commander Byrd today when the Polar flier arrived in Boston.

"Just before I left New York, I received a message of good will and best wishes for success from William Randolph Hearst, and for this I am very grateful."

U. S. SUGGESTS ABOLISHING SUBMARINES

point program centering about a reduction in the tonnage and armament of capital ships.

The British delegation advocated limiting the size of individual submarines to 1,800 tons, making the life of battleships 26 instead of 20 years, limiting all future cruisers to 7,500 tons and 6-inch guns, aircraft carriers to 25,000 instead of 27,000 tons, with six-inch instead of eight-inch guns, and a change from 16-inch to 13.5-inch guns on all battleships.

Japan proposed that there be no maximum limit for the tonnage of individual vessels.

Japan will reserve the right to raise the question of naval bases, and will particularly suggest restrictions regarding the bases at Hawaii and Singapore. It was learned today.

Furthermore, Japan will support the French contention that small ships, for purposes of disarmament, should be divided only into two categories, surface craft and submarines.

U. S. PLAN OUTLINED.

For practical purposes the American proposal established four classes of ships to be dealt with in the proposed new treaty, which is to be supplemental to the Washington treaty.

These classes are:
The cruiser class.
The destroyer class.
The submarine class.
An exempt class that includes all other types, such as supply ships, tenders, mine sweepers, etc.

In the cruiser class the American proposal is that the United States and Great Britain limit their tonnage to not exceeding 300,000 tons as against 180,000 for Japan.

In the destroyer class the tonnage limitation for Great Britain and the United States would be 250,000 as against 150,000 for Japan. In the submarine class 90,000 tons was proposed as the limit for Great Britain and the United States as against 54,000 for Japan.

WHAT THEY'D SCRAP.

If the American plan were adopted and if the limit of cruisers were fixed at 300,000 tons, and of destroyers at 250,000 tons, the United States would have to scrap approximately 62,000 tons of vessels of either the cruiser or the destroyer type and 80,000 additional tons in these classes upon completion of cruisers now building.

Great Britain, if her present cruiser building program were completed, would have to scrap approximately 40,000 tons of the cruiser and destroyer class.

On the basis of a submarine limitation of 90,000 tons for the United States and Great Britain and 54,000 for Japan, the United States upon the completion of her present building program would have to scrap approximately 3,900 tons of submarines; Great Britain and Japan would be required to scrap none.

The proposed treaty provides for a gradual system of replacement of old vessels with new ones.

The American program, while it apparently makes the United States sacrifice more actual tonnage than the other powers, nevertheless has considerable material advantages from the standpoint of American naval efficiency.

U. S. Bares 'Joker' in British Navy Cut Proposal

Washington, June 20 (I.N.S.).—Great Britain's proposals to the American naval program, at Geneva today, met an unfavorable reception in Washington.

The "joker" in the British program is considered to be the suggestion that cruisers be limited to 7,500 tons and that their armament be reduced from 8-inch to 6-inch guns.

Naval experts considered this a clever move of Britain's experts to gain a marked advantage in cruiser strength. The "joker" is that Britain circles the globe with naval bases, and long cruising radius is not vitally necessary because of comparatively short distances between those bases.

Helfrich on Broadway at the beach.

The woman and a little girl were standing in front of the stand casually reading the headlines on the newspapers on display when the woman noticed a Lawrence paper, which announced in big type that the Lawrence Council had offered a reward for the apprehension of the tramp barber.

The woman read the description of the man who is sought.

"Oh! Look what we missed. That is the man we hauled from Concord to Manchester. I'm sure it's the man," she said excitedly to the girl. The newsdealer questioned the woman, who declared she was convinced the barber had been a passenger in her car.

Then, before the woman's name or address could be learned she disappeared in the crowd.

Helfrich notified the police, but a search revealed no trace of the woman could be found.

Believing the lead a good one, however, the search was today taken up in Manchester. Another squad of State police under the direction of Inspector Richard Griffin is searching the woods near Newmarket, N. H. Two boys, Mamont and Luigi Baudent, sons of a Newmarket farmer, told the police while walking along the Packers Falls road near their home, last Monday, they encountered a man who answered the description of the tramp barber.

The man was watching a gang of railroad workers, one of whom called to the Baudet boys to bring him a hammer.

"Nothing doing," one of the boys replied.

"I'll call the police if you don't," the track walker jocularly shouted back.

At the mention of the word "police," the stranger leaped from the abutment and fled into the woods.

TUFTS DEGREES FOR BYRD AND MRS. ROGERS

With words of encomium and praise, Tufts College today conferred honorary degrees on Commander Richard E. Byrd, Congresswoman Edith Nourse Rogers and Arthur Atwater Kent.

Byrd, the North Pole flier who will hazard a flight from New York to Paris this week, was declared to be "in the front rank of aviators for all time," by President John R. Cousens of Tufts in conferring the degree of Master of Science.

In addition to those received by Byrd, Mrs. Rogers (Master of Arts) and Kent, the radio expert (Doctor of Science), degrees were also conferred as follows:

Doctor of Laws, Charles Leavitt Edgar, president of the Edison Illuminating Co. of Boston; Doctor of Education, Charles Morison Jordan, Minneapolis educator, and Charles Winfield Palmer of Boston; Doctor of Divinity, Rev. Flint Mandrin Bissell; Doctor of Science, Frank Howard Leahy; Doctor of Letters, Rev. John Vanschaick, Jr., of Washington, D. C.; Master of Arts, Herbert Adams and Everett Allen Davis.

There were 277 graduates receiving degrees in the several departments of the institution, including Jackson College, the women's department.

ONE SISTER ILL AND OTHER GOES MAD

Two Somerville sisters, inseparable for 70 years, highly educated grand-daughters of the famous Lord Cavendish Hamilton of England, are parted today by poverty and illness.

They are Mary A. Hamilton and Frances Hamilton of No. 2 Wesley park, Somerville, and many old-time residents shook their heads sadly as they learned of the women's plight.

Privately tutored and knowing little of the world, they found themselves without money on the death of their father, who had come to America to seek fortune.

But friends helped them to obtain positions, Frances as a clerk in the registry of deeds in Cambridge, and Mary as secretary for a Boston merchant.

However, they had inherited from their father a disregard for money, spent freely, and age, with all its tragedy, overtook them.

Both began to brood over a hopeless outlook. Frances was taken ill and sent to Somerville Hospital, where she is today under the care of physicians.

This added to the burder on the This added to the burden on the mind of Mary. The absence of her sister preyed upon her mind, and finally she was sent to Boston Psychopathic Hospital for observation. Later she was sent to the Somerville City Home, but her mind was in such a state that the authorities feared she might do harm to herself or others.

Saturday she was taken to Somerville police station, kept in a cell over night for lack of other accommodations, and then was taken to the State Hospital in Worcester.

HOLYOKE LIGHT RATES LOWEST IN EAST

Holyoke, June 20 (I.N.S.).—The municipally owned gas and electric company scored another record today when it reduced its price of electricity to domestic consumers from five cents to four and a half cents a kilowatt hour, effective July 1.

This is said to be the lowest rate in the East and means a local saving on electric light bills of approximately $41,000.

BOTTLES STREW ROAD IN WILD RUM CHASE

During a wild chase from Newton Centre, Newton, to Hanover street, in the North End, early today, five men in a taxicab managed to keep ahead of a car containing two Newton policemen until they had emptied the taxicab of a cargo of liquor.

When the Newton officers, with drawn revolvers, finally cornered the men on Hanover street not a drop of liquor remained in the taxicab, but the road between Newton and Boston was liberally bestrewn with broken bottles.

TAXI IN COLLISION.

When arraigned in Newton Court today the only charge that could be preferred against three of the men was drunkenness. A fourth was charged with being drunk and breaking glass on the street, while the driver of the car, Herbert K. Zoller of Columbus avenue, was charged with being drunk and driving while under the influence of liquor.

The taxicab containing the men and the liquor collided with the machine of Ross H. Salford of Woodbine street, Auburndale, at Newton Corner. The taxicab did not stop and Patrolmen Frank Feeley and Henry J. Loughlin, who were standing nearby, leaped into the Salford machine and gave chase.

FIVE ARRESTED.

When the men in the taxicab became aware that they were pursued, the shower of bottles started. So eager were the men to get rid off the booze that they didn't stop to lower the windows of the taxicab and three of these were broken by the flying bottles.

In addition to the driver of the car, Joseph F. Green of Matrose street, Dorchester; Joseph Monroe, of Columbus avenue and Frank J. White of Pembroke street, Boston, were arraigned on the charge of drunkenness. James E. Sullivan of Huntington avenue, Sharon, was charged with being drunk and throwing glass on the public highway, the police alleging that he threw bottles from the taxicab while the machine was still in Newton.

FATHER BAILS DAUGHTER IN 'DEATH PLOT'

New Brunswick, N. J., June 20 (I.N.S.).—Further evidence to substantiate the story of a plot to kill a family of three is being sought by the authorities today as Miss Bessie Morse, aged 40, and well to do, was released on $7,000 bail. The bail was furnished by Miss Morse's 84-year-old father, a wealthy land owner of Prospect Plains.

Miss Morse and her negro maid, Mamie Todd, thirty-one, are charged with conspiracy to murder. The charge was made after County Detective David declared before Judge Kirkpatrick that evidence had been obtained to connect them with a plot to kill Miss Morse's sister, Mrs. Grace Dey, her husband, Elmer, and their adopted son, Raymond, seventeen.

The original plan, it is alleged, was to kill Miss Morse's father and mother. Her mother, Mrs. Catherine Morse, died of natural causes on April 24.

Mystery is injected into the story that the police are trying to unfold. The man who first told Prosecutor Toolan, of Middlesex County, that such a plot was in the making is being shielded by the police.

Miss Morse denies all charges and has engaged Freeman Woodbridge, of New Brunswick, to deten hr.

The culmination of several weeks' work by Detective David and his two aides, in which they posed as gunmen, came Friday with the arrest of Mamie Todd. Saturday, Miss Morse was arrested.

Miss Morse did not look like a woman who had planned to kill anyone, as she sat on the arm of her father's chair with her arm about him, and gave her first statement. She said:

"It has been a great shock to me. It is utterly ridiculous. The story must have come from the imagination of my maid."

Neither she nor her husband regained consciousness until several hours after their return. Then she staggered into a neighbor's house and told what happened. Both were taken to a hospital in this city. The three robbers obtained $90 and a diamond ring.

N. E. IN FAVOR OF ST. LAWRENCE WATERWAY

The development of a St. Lawrence River waterway connecting the Great Lakes with the Atlantic Ocean is strongly advocated by the joint New England-St. Lawrence Waterway Committee as against the proposed "All-American route across New York State to New York city, in a report made public today.

The New England committee's report declares that not only would the St. Lawrence project cost only a fraction of the "All-American route, but the advantages to New England would be manifoldly greater.

"The opening of such a waterway," the report sets forth, "would open to New England industries a new and cheap transportation artery, both for its incoming raw materials as well as for shipments of its manufactured goods.

MAKE FOOD CHEAPER.

"Similarly it should result in a substantial saving in the cost of the food supply of New England, 80 per cent. of which now originates beyond its own borders. It will, in large measure, make New England independent of railroad delivery from the West and will establish competitive rates which should be beneficial to this community."

The joint New England-St. Lawrence waterway committee is comprised of a union of separate committees from each of the six New England States. Charles R. Gow, prominent Boston contractor and former president of the Associated Industries of Massachusetts, is chairman of the joint committee.

MORE ELECTRIC POWER

The report points out that the development of the St. Lawrence waterway will make available to New England a large portion of the 5,000,000 H. P. of hydraulic energy that would be developed by the project, whereas the "All-American" route across New York state would not develop any power that would be available for this section.

"So far as New England is concerned" the report continues, "if its interests are entitled to any consideration in connection with the project, the New York route would be likely to prove disadvantageous, since it would cut the entire flow of traffic from west to east, and thus in all probability intercept most movements of commerce which might otherwise move through New England ports.

The report urges the early entrance of this country into negotiation with the Canadian government over the question of a treaty that would make possible the development of the St. Lawrence route.

BYRD RECEIVES DEGREE IN A BORROWED GOWN

A perplexing problem as to whether a United States naval full dress uniform should be covered by a gown came up in Commander Byrd's case at Tufts today. It is necessary in the conferring of a degree that the recipient wear a gown. Finally, Byrd agreed that perhaps an abbreviated gown that only partially covered, might be considered correct. So he was handed a gown whose sleeves had been amputated half-way and whose skirt had been trimmed to flapper length. But he was, perhaps, the only man in America ever to receive a degree while clad in a gown topped by a white navy cap.

$300,000,000 TAX CUT SEEN

Washington, June 20 (I.N.S.)—Congress will hand the American people a Christmas present in the form of a tax cut of about $300,000,000 next December with the sanction of the Treasury Department, officials said today.

Income tax payments for the fiscal year ending June 30, under the 1926 revenue act, will exceed those in 1925, under the much higher rates of the 1925 law by nearly $500,000,000, experts predicted.

The girl, posing as a Wellesley College student from a wealthy home, has been victimizing Lynn and Salem merchants for several years, via the bogus check route, the police claim.

RUTH ADMITS SHE WEEPS IN SING SING

CHAPTER 23

By RUTH BROWN SNYDER

Copyright, 1927, King Features Synd., Inc.

THE latest laugh to me is a detailed tale from Sing Sing, that I have crying fits and that I complain that I get too much to eat and that I rave for face powder (which is given me a little at a time for fear I will eat it and get sick) and that my hair, denied its accustomed chemicals, is turning chestnut brown.

The weeping, of course, is a fair enough and obvious enough guess. I have no hysterical convulsions, but I admit I do shed a few tears. Great grief, haven't I cause enough? When I think of what I am and who I am and where I am and whither I am headed; when I think of my daughter and my mother; when the remorse of repentance overwhelms me—I weep, yes—and I am not ashamed of it.

When I was a kid my playmates called me 'Cotton-top." I had long, yellow ringlets that my mother spent hours making with water around her fond fingers. My hair was never naturally curly. If any really want to know what color my hair is turning, it is not black or brown—it is gray!

LIFE TURNED GRAY.

My whole life has turned gray.

Now that these topics—sufficiently absorbing to occupy space in powerful metropolitan dailies between Lindy and Levine—are disposed of, may I say a few lines, also, about the persistent rumor that my daughter has repudiated me—may I, please?

It is a matter closer to my own heart, believe me, than my liberty, my life or anything. The secret is this:

Before these words see publication, the courts may have decided whether my baby is to be given into the custody of my mother, who adores her, whom she adores, and who raised her more than I did: or whether she is to go into the custody of the Snyders, relatives of my late husband.

With all affectionate regard and unreserved respect for the Snyders, I am still inexpressibly eager—praying, hoping—that Lorraine shall remain with her grandmother.

The Snyders were not outwardly hostile to me during the dark hours of my trial. Their silence was eloquently noble. Of all the world, which snapped its judgment against me before the facts were known, (they are not known yet, in truth!) these bereaved blood-kin and relatives by marriage of the man I stand condemned for having murdered, never whispered a word against me in public.

They were always kind to me and were always lovely to Lorraine.

HAS SUFFERED ENOUGH.

But they hardly knew her and she, an impressionable nine-year-old, does not feel close to them. Her grandmother is as much a part of her little body as her arm or her heart. They have a common cause of sorrow and sympathy now which, since their common shock and grief (don't think Lorraine doesn't know all about what it's all about); has drawn them even more closely into one more closely than any outsider who hasn't been through what our family has suffered can appreciate or visualize or imagine.

The Snyders, with all their high-minded restraint toward me, for which I breathe a prayer for their happiness in thanks and understanding, must harbor in their hearts some germ of resentment; at least doubt aginst me.

Blood is thicker than water. How well I know it and feel it as I write these views from my innermost sentiments. Lorraine is of their blood, yes; but she is also of mine.

They would be kind to her, I am convinced. But—would it be humanly possible for them to forget, expunge?

Lorraine has suffered enough for my sins. Why should she bear more for them?

She wants to stay with her grandmother. She writes me so every day. She sends me beautiful letters with dozens of x's covering every scrap of white space.

Now, while that matter was pending, I dreaded the thought of having any criticism started if I had her come here, to a death house, to visit me.

If she did come, no one could have brought her but my mother.

We have no one else. There is no one else I would permit, probably no one else she would go with, herself.

That might have brought my mother into severe unkind light. We are so searchingly watched all the time.

When Lorraine took the witness stand to do her tiny bit toward saving her mother's life and her mother's last surviving shred of honor I pleaded with my lawyers not to let her—not to subject her to the ordeal, not to burn into her impressionable memory the recollection of those five minutes. But this was no trifling matter, either for me or for my counsel—their careers were in the balance as well as my very heartbeats. It was their sworn duty to use every legal method to establish their defence for me.

I yielded—not to their pleadings, but to their commands. I was in their hands.

If for that I was denounced a beast, what would they say of me and my mother if she came leading a tear-stained, frightened child here to see her beloved mother through bars and gratings.

CHARGES BROKER HAD HIMSELF ARRESTED

With the charge that Samuel Mussman, Hyde Park broker, got himself arrested by the police of Nashua, N. H., in the attempt to evade trial in the local courts, Dist. Atty. William J. Foley obtained a warrant for the man's arrest and he will be extradited.

In Nashua, Mussman and Samuel Goldstein, also of Hyde Park, are charged with fleecing Julius F. Hammar, a 70-year-old farmer, and his son, James F., by getting them to exchange gilt-edged securities worth $40,000 for fraudulent stock in a company that did not exist to reclaim rubber from old tires, rubber boots and garden hose. Each is held in [illegible] bail.

Judge Would Have to Call Her Quickly to Catch Her Sober

Mrs. Clara Furlong, forty-five, of Liberty street, Lynn, appeared in Lynn District Court today to tell the court why she had broken her parole from the State Farm, where she had been sentenced some time ago for drunkenness.

The court was busy and Mrs. Furlong had to wait. When her name was finally called the woman was found helplessly intoxicated in a dark corner of the courthouse. A police matron found the "stump" of a pint of liquor in her blouse.

She was carried into court and re-sentenced to the farm. But the sentence and the trip to the farm meant nothing to her. She was still unconscious.

SACCO GUARD ON U. S. EMBASSY

Santiago, Chile, June 20 (A.P.)—The Chilean government has established a special guard day and night at the American Embassy as a result of the receipt of a letter by American Ambassador William M. Collier threatening him with death in the event that Nicolo Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti are executed.

Ambassador Collier, who left Saturday on a trip to Bolivia, turned over to the police the unsigned letter.

police were convinced that Miller was the man they sought.

A squad of officers led by Sergeant Frank Gilman and composed of Special Officers Lynch of the Milk street Station and Brett, Gardner and Manahan of the La Grange street station descended on the house.

The bit of evidence that brought the man's confession was a blood-stained handkerchief which the police found beside the blown safe in the tea company office. The handkerchief, used by the cracksman to staunch the flow of blood on an injured hand bore the same laundry-mark as the man's other laundry found in his room.

Miller was arraigned before Judge Murray in Municipal Court on three charges of safebreaking. He pleaded not guilty to each charge and was held under $15,000 bail for action of the grand jury.

150 TONS OF GROWTH CUT FROM "IRONSIDES" HULL

One hundred and fifty tons of submarine growth has been removed from the hull of the historic frigate Constitution, which was placed in dry dock at the navy yard on Thursday.

The vessel in dry dock weighs 1,640 tons and is now resting on an even keel, it being necessary to use 200 tons extra of lead ballast to get her down on the ways. It is estimated that it will take about two years to rebuild the ship.

YALE ALUMNI JOIN WOOLEY CONTROVERSY

New Haven, Conn., June 20 (A.P.).—The controversy between undergraduate Yale and the corporation over refusal of the latter to give E. M. Wooley, '11, long dramatic coach, an English department faculty appointment, has received some notice from the alumni body, it was indicated today. There were reports that some alumni were to withdraw gifts to the $20,000,000 endowment fund, but the only official statement was that of Carl A. Lohmann, university secretary. He said:

"Inquiry shows that less than a dozen graduates and undergraduates out of 17,000 subscribers to the Yale endowment fund have written in about the posibility of cancelling their pledges."

CHILLY RAINS USHER IN SUMMER TOMORROW

Country-wide weather reports today indicated a New England focus for scattered rainstorms to wash Spring off the calendar for tomorrow and furnish a cool reception for Summer on Wednesday.

From North Carolina to New Hampshire the entire Atlantic seaboard today awoke wet and shivering in a temperature below 60 above, while from Texas northward to the South Dakota Summer White House the mercury dropped with the falling rain.

Forecast for Boston and vicinity. Mostly cloudy with showers tonight and possibly Tuesday morning; not much change in temperature; fresh east to north winds.

'DEVIL DIDN'T BRING ME HERE' SAYS SUNDAY

to hold a glass of water for the evangelist.

Then the evangelist seized the table and shoved it back against the wall so violently that the trustees of Tremont Temple must have had cold chills for a moment.

It was a typical Sunday sermon, chock full of hellfire and brimstone, and 500 disappointed men and women were turned from the doors unable to gain admittance to the spacious temple.

"You people had better start thinking about Heaven," the evangelist shouted, as he executed a three-foot leap into the air.

"STANDING ROOM IN HEAVEN."

"The hearse will call around for the millionaire as well as the hobo—for the college professor as well as for the fellow who never met a multiplication table.

"As for me," and Sunday fairly roared this sentence, "I'd rather have standing room in Heaven than the bridal suite in Hell."

Earlier in the day Sunday called on Governor Fuller at the State House. When he emerged from the Governor's office he was asked what he thought about Sacco and Vanzetti.

"Give them the juice—burn them if they're guilty—that's the way to handle it," the evangelist replied without a moment's hesitation.

COMMENDS GOVERNOR.

"If they did it they ought to get theirs. The minister, Clarence Richeson, went to the chair, didn't he?

"I'm sick and tired of having these foreigners and radicals coming over here and tell us what we should do. Yes, give these two birds the juice if they did the murder."

The evangelist was asked if he had discussed the case with the Governor.

"I didn't butt in. The Governor is handling that case just right," was the reply.

The evangelist took occasion to praise Boston for its stand against unwholesome and improper books. He also took occasion to defend lying under certain conditions.

CLEANING UP BOOKS.

"Boston is doing a remarkable job in cleaning up the rotten book situation," he declared. "The Hub is showing the way to the rest of the country. Books of the Elmer Gantry type by the so-called famous authors are demorizing children with immature minds."

In defending lying under certain conditions the evangelists declared that there was every difference between a falsehood and an 18-karat out and out lie.

"I'd lie any old time to save Mrs. Sunday from some old geezer," he declared, "and then I'd fix it up with the Lord afterwards. Sometimes a person is justified in telling a lie, particularly if it has to do with withholding information from persons who have no right to know it."

"MA" SUNDAY PRESENT.

"Ma" Sunday accompanied her husband to Boston and attended the Tremont Temple meeting with him.

It was the first appearance of the evangelist in Boston since he conducted services in the Huntington avenue tabernacle in 1917. That he has not lost his hold on Boston was indicated when he appeared on the platform at Tremont Temple. The 3,500 men and women in the audience cheered him to the echo.

It was a wild demonstration such as few pulpit orators in Boston ever received and through it the evangelist stood bowing and smiling his delight.

WIFE ACCUSES LEDERMAN

rect testimony ran the name of Mrs. Vail, described by Lederman to his wife before and after marriage as his "benefactress."

Mrs. Lederman, in her testimony, enumerated a dozen occasions on which she said her husband struck her at their home, No. 1408 Commonwealth avenue, Newton.

She described an incident at their home when Lederman received a letter calling him to New York and his anger at having discovered she had perceived the letter in his pocket.

His anger, she testified, resulted in a bruise on her thigh when he threw her against a radiator. Mrs. Lederman told the court her husband went to New York to visit his "benefactress" every two weeks and frequently left her without any money for her support in his absence.

He was always in good spirits when he returned, she continued, but was easily moved to show bad temper when reminded of her lack of funds.

Mrs. Lederman testified her husband told her the engagement ring he gave her was bought by Mrs. Vail, but after his arrest on the larceny charge, the witness declared, a collector called at the house for a balance of $350 on the purchase.

Under cross-examination, Mrs. Lederman denied that her disappointment over the failure of her husband to get the $250,000 Vail gift was the motive for her divorce suit.

She admitted having received 15 letters from Lederman since he has been in Concord, but said she had never visited him there in response to their invitations.

10 DAYS MORE TO ENTER FOOT COMPETITION

New England girls and matrons have but ten more days to step into the Boston Evening American's Perfect Foot Contest.

The quest for the feature feminine feet of New England must close June 30.

Scores of photographs of pretty ankles and toes have arrived with every mail since the opening of the contest, and there are thousands of others who are planning to file their entry as soon as their photographs can be delivered.

The Contest Editor would like to receive the photograph of every woman in New England that his choice of New England's perfect feet may cause no disappointments among those who might have entered, but hesitated.

A gold medal and $100 cash prize with a perfect pair of pretty shoes await the winner of the contest.

Twenty-four other lesser prizes, including cash awards to some and costly shoes to all, will be distributed to the owners of the 24 pairs of feet that next approach the perfection of the first prize winner.

It will be no idle boast to claim New England's perfect feet. The experienced anatomists who will assist the Contest Editor in choosing the winner are so well known in their profession that their selection will be authoritative and carry official weight.

The contest rules are simply these: Send a photograph of your feet, either full length or just from the knees, and have your name and address legibly written on the back of the photograph, to the Perfect Foot Contest Editor.

SEXTUPLE WEDDING HELD WITH MAGNIFIED POMP

Surakarta, Java, June 20 (A.P.)—Five princesses and one prince—all children of the Susuhunan of Surakarta, an immensely wealthy Javanese prince of ancient lineage, were married today at a joint ceremony with Mohammedan rites before an intimate court circle.

The princesses were married to members of the Susuhunan's house and the prince married the daughter of a neighboring potentate.

Scenes of oriental splendor marked the ceremonies. The famous Javanese wedding dances in brilliant costumes, glittering with jewels, to the music of weird native instruments, exceeded anything hitherto seen in Java.

The Susuhunan, who maintains with pomp and magnificence a show of local power under Dutch suzerainty, recently suffered a painful bereavement—his favorite cat died. It was buried with a ceremonial no cat in Java ever had before. Laid in a costly casket, its remains were borne to the burial place by twenty-four elaborately accoutered warriors and followed by an escort of lancers on horseback.

COAST GUARD TO ABANDON NANTUCKET AND BLOCK IS.

New London, Ct., June 20 (A.P.)—Effective July 1, section base 14 at Block Island will be discontinued, coastguard headquarters announced today. The radio plants at the island will be maintained. The island is the nearest point of land to the stretch of water where the vessels of Rum Row dispensed their liquid wares. The section base at Nantucket, Mass., will also be abandoned. This change is to be made in the interests of economy.

PASTOR GRAD SAYS YALE IS 'RUN BY OIL GANG'

New Haven, Ct., June 20 (A.P.).—Rev. George Chalmers Richmond of New York City, Yale alumnus, here for commencement, who urged the youth of America to resist the call of war and charged that an oil "gang" ran Yale, expects to make further "denunciation" of the "wrongs" being suffered by his alma mater.

"I am going to stay in town during this week of commencement," he said, "and speak every night on the wrongs committed against the university through its capitalistic leadership."

The minister's classmates, who threatened to break up a meeting in the First Methodist Church where he made his charges, have asserted that they will act against him in some manner if he carries out his threat to speak today.

Rev. Mr. Richmond said:

"The truth is that this country is governed by the money power. Yale is governed by the money power. The other day Payne Whitney just handed over to Yale a cool million dollars. Almost the next day he died. Where did Payne Whitney get that million? It came to him through his father and his uncle, Colonel Oliver Payne of the Standard Oil gang. This gang runs Yale and I propose to protect it."

DEGREES GIVEN AT MANY N. E. COLLEGES

him, by the power of his brain, man has made himself master of them all. His strength is as the strength of a mighty host, his swiftness surpasses the speed of any winged creature. On land and sea, or in the air he is transcendant.

"By slow stages, by the almost imperceptible movements which mark the progress of evolution, man's pre-eminence has been achieved because in advance were found one or two—a little group of leaders—to show the way for their fellowmen.

"Commander Byrd, in the struggle for the conquest of the air, just now attended with spectacular success, you have played a conspicuous part. Your intrepid courage, your boldness, tempered by high intelligence, have shown the way.

"Your flight over the frozen wastes of the North, even to the Pole itself, ensures for you a place in the front rank of aviators for all time . . . Richard Evelyn Byrd, master of science."

In conferring the Arthur Atwater Kent degress, President Cousens said:

"For more than 400 years, may be traced the tremendous consequence of that invention by which universal dissemination of the printed word was made possible.

MAKE MANKIND AKIN.

"In the future alone may be found the ultimate far-reaching effects of those processes developed in our own day by which the power of the spoken word has been extended over unlimited ranges of land and sea, the printing press and the radio, the two great industries which make all mankind akin.

"Arthur Atwater Kent, by whose rare inventive gift the art of wireless communication has been advanced, to whose vision may be attributed the establishment of multi-station broadcasting. Arthur Atwater Kent, doctor of science."

Relative to Congressman Edith Nourse Rogers, the Tufts president said in conferring her degree:

"Democracy is always in danger from two directions. The citizenry may neglect the franchis, leadership may fall to the demagogue. The second follows the first inevitably.

When, therefore, an important district of our State registers its choice of Congressional representation by an overwhelming majority, when the object of that choice is one whose character and ability inspire confidence, there is cause for rejoicing.

"There is cause for rejoicing when the first woman to represent Massachusetts in the Congress of the United States proved her capacity to discharge the exacting duties of her office in accordance with the highest traditions of this Commonwealth."

Urges Social Service as Substitute for War

Middlebury, Vt., June 20 (A.P.).—Social service as a moral equivalent for war was urged today by Dr. Howard Chandler Robbins, dean of the Cathedral of St. John the Divine, New York, in the commencement address at the 127th annual exercises of Middlebury College.

A radical change in public opinion was needed, he said, to bring this about, a change in human nature and in the conception men have of their work, and their relation to their work.

"Earning one's living is not the sole or even the main object of human industry," he declared. "We must all have a consciousness of our vocation as a means of rendering public service."

Shopping with Priscilla Price

Dear Anne:

Wouldn't you like a letter on hot weather specials today? Specials as cool as a cucumber, crisp as lettuce and as refreshing to the soul as sparkling ginger ale. Then read on, my dear, for every item here is dedicated to keeping you as dainty as a morning rose during the next two months.

Miss Wiggin

Has returned from New York with a shop full of dresses which are absolutely the prettiest versions of Summer silks that I have ever seen. They hardly seem woven by the art of man, but bits of flowerland caught against a blue sky, or the rich tan of a sunset beach. Some reflect the soft tones of July, the silvery colors of young growing things. Some have caught the shades of the harvest, the magenta of the asters and flame of nasturtiums. There are printed chiffons of every hue, full and fluffy over their crepe slips, and the brief and breezy frocks "pour la sport." Miss Wiggin has marked them to $16.75 and that's a very low price. But you haven't been up to see her new shop, on the third floor of the Fabyan Building, 26 West Street, and this is her personal invitation. (I'll tell you, confidentially, that she actually saw some of these $16.75 dresses marked to $29.50 at one of New York's most popular shops.)

The Girl

Who keeps a cool head under the blazing sun is the one who has presented her hair with a permanent wave at Mertin's (3rd floor, Dexter Building, 453 Washington Street). Into the surf, under the shower, out in the morning mist or off in the fog—wherever she goes, she's always softly, bewitchingly curled. Others may be limp and straggled, straight as a string and bedraggled, but she's as free as the brave—and long may it wave—for her locks fall in big sweeping undulations that frame her in a cloud of glory. And well she knows it. "But how did she dare to have a permanent?" the timid folks inquire. She dared because she knew about Mertin's, because she knew they were hair and scalp specialists of high reputation. And that's the answer to that.

Sweet Summer Breeze!

Have you run into that wondrous silky fabric for warm weather dresses—or is it my own discovery? At any rate, Anne I'm very good to share my secret for it's one of those treasures a wise woman keeps to herself. I found it at 130 Bedford Street, right around the corner from Summer, at The Duro Company. A little shop with bolts and bolts of this exquisite material. It is mostly silk, washable and guaranteed fast color, woven with just enough rayon or celanese to give a silvery sheen. And it comes in every color imaginable—the softest rose, tones of gray, brown, tan, orchid and in blues that shine like the sea with the sun upon it. It is woven into adorable prints for the children, into light porous weaves for us, a little heavier for men's shirtings and heavier still—in fact, very heavy, for draperies and hangings. Now, I'm not going to tell you another word about it, except that it's very reasonable, and if you see someone soon clad in the loveliest fabric you ever saw, you'll know it is me.

"Lindy" Dresses

Are the latest attraction at Evelyn's Shop, 8 Winter Street. And straight as an arrow has it flown into popularity. They come in washable sports silks, at $9.50. With short sleeves, pleats in the skirt, a long two toned tie and an [illegible] aeroplane embroidered in white, sailing joyously over its heart. In green, it's as cool as a cucumber, in yellow, as cheerful as a buttercup, and in rose like a bashful blush. Along with these dresses go the $9.50 sport coats, in white and light blue wool, woven in checks. Long coats, yet light as a feather. And there are other styles at the same price. All over prints, darling georgettes, crepes in plain [illegible] and [illegible]. Next comes the $13.75 price, with dozens and dozens of lovely things in every size and for every type. The lace and georgette ensembles with long coats of georgette, the stunning black georgette and colorful crepe romaines. New dresses every day, [illegible] as [illegible] as they come. But for the sweetest and cleverest sports dress of them all, we'll have to "leave it to Lindy."

After the Luxury of a Swim

Isn't it delightful to slip into your beautiful pair of Holeproof Hosiery? Holeproof completes your sense of well being, with the sparkle and joy which the salt water gives. It falls in with the lilt in your step as you come along the sand to rejoin your friends. You could stretch your finger tips clear to the sky with the sheer exuberance of living—and your Holeproof could stretch itself clear down into the sand, in the satisfaction of being the smartest hosiery on the beach. And as you sink down into your place among the others, you sigh with utter content at the exquisite length of luxury which ends in your shoes.

Oh, but you wouldn't think of wearing Holeproof on the beach. It's far too nice for that. Holeproof is the hosiery for weddings and dances, for teas, the dress up occasions. It's the aristocrat of stockings and must not be subjected to the strain of sports wear. At least—that is your opinion until you know more about Holeproof.

It is the aristocrat—no doubt of that. It feels like the essence of luxury to wear them. But Holeproof is made to wear—long and honestly. And it has been priced so low that you may have as many pair of them as you need. At Talbot's, 395 Washington Street, the great New England headquarters, they have a new number for just this popular demand. Holeproof at $1.50 a pair. Full fashioned, pure silk, with the famous Ex-Toe reinforcement and in all the exquisite shades of the season.

The Beaches Will Be Gay This Summer

With great colored umbrellas. Umbrellas of every hue and stripe imaginable. No longer will we sit 'neath the shade of a khaki colored mushroom the hue of pea soup, nor see a multitude of dull green blotches upon the shining sand. But we'll curl up under one of dashing awning cloth, in the cool grays or blues, the brilliant orange and black, or one of blue and red. And everywhere we look, we'll see bright umbrellas, as gay as a holiday crowd, perched like striped butterflies along the shore.

As we come to know these umbrellas, they will take on as much personality as the people who own them. Yes—own them. For no longer need we rent one from the nearest bath house. Filene's have secured a great stock of them, which they are selling at such a low price every family can afford its own. They have them for $5.00, for $6.50 and $7.85—of the finest heavy awning cloth, with great long handles tipped with brass, which separate in two pieces for convenient carrying in your car. The umbrellas have a six foot spread—six feet of cool shade, out of the glare of the sun, for all the family, the lunch and the dog. Those at $5.00 come in the plain colors, those for $6.50 and $7.85 are in every combination of color and stripes that awning cloth is heir to.

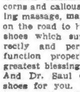
So we are adding an umbrella to our outing equipment, and every time the lunch basket and thermos bottle goes out for the day, the umbrella is going, too.

The Search for Hot Weather Specials

Led us straight down to Talbot's for the sale of summer pajamas. Because breathes there no man with soul so dead—that he doesn't revel in a generous stock of cool, comfortable pajamas, when the nights get warm and it's hard to sleep. Just to know that there are three or four fresh new sets lying smooth and unmussed in his chiffonier, just to see them with his favorite stripes and silken frogs gives him the pleasure every man feels when he knows he is well cared for. And when he knows that they came from Talbot's, that some of them, indeed, are made by the Bates-Street Company, makers of his shirts, then he has the pride of possessing a wife who is thrifty and wise as well as interested in his comfort.

And at Talbot's we found the festival of pajamas in full progress, with new shipments coming in to take the place of those which were sold. We found pajamas of fine madras, with beautifully made silken frogs, for $1.35 a pair, three pair for $4.00. In white, tan, blue or heliotrope. We found them cut generously full, with seams firmly finished and every detail showing fine and thorough workmanship. Also pajamas in figured and plain broadcloths for $1.85 in the same colors. And a new broadcloth model made by the Bates-Street Company, for $2.65, four sets for $10. And last, but not least, those of genuine soisette for $2.65 also. And soisette, you know, is the silky smooth fabric which means the utmost in luxury to a man.

Footnotes

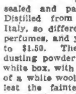


Sometimes contain the m[illegible] of the essay. This footnote certainly is a vital part of my letter. Because you may not know what comfort and relief you can give your feet, just by making a visit to my competent podiatrist-chiropodist, Dr. [illegible] P. Saul, room 312 of the New Studio Building, 110 Tremont Street. You may not realize that a little scientific treatment on corns and callouses, with a soothing massage, may start your feet on the road to health. And that shoes which support them correctly and persuade them to function properly will be the greatest blessing you ever knew. And Dr. Saul can order these shoes for you. They are made in the softest Summer kid leathers, with built in arch supports for your individual need, at $8.00 a pair. It takes only a few days to get them, and oh, what a sigh of relief those abused feet give when at last they slip into some shoes that are right.

Wetstone's Fashion Shop

Throws open its doors today in a formal opening, down at 251 Tremont Street, opposite Metropolitan Theatre. "The Shop of Youth" it is called, and surely there was never a name more fitting. If you love styles that reveal the spirit of Youth in all its gayety, brightness and beauty, and want to delight in the sense of sitting on the top of the world, you will lose your heart to this shop. And if you appreciate having the most popular modes of New York brought to you at a remarkably reasonable price, you will lose no time in forming an acquaintance. Should you go to take advantage of this special opening, and buy a dress, you will receive a souvenir which will make it a red-letter day in your memory book. It's a beautiful shop, Anne, right in the center of the theatre district, and it's full of charmingly attractive clothes.

Of Course



Meyer Jonasson's Toilet Goods Department is as honey to the honey bee to the woman who takes particular pains to keep fresh and dainty. And there I found a gem of a gift for a bridge prize, the traveler or your own sweet self. A bottle of Givimme perfume, which slips into its own suede leather case. Made, sealed and packaged in Italy. Distilled from the flowers of Italy, so different from ordinary perfumes, and yet marked for us to $1.50. Then the Givimme dusting powder in its black and white box, with a big fleecy cloud of a white wool puff. ($2.00.) And lest the faintest suggestion of perspiration take you unaware and taint your whole personality I want to emphasize again that "Nil," Meyer Jonasson's own preparation, will neutralize all unpleasant odors. It is a delicate white cream, which is delightful to use, absolutely harmless, and only costs 25c.

Helen S. Lynch

Has a delightful shop, room 324, at 110 Tremont Street, in which to get that permanent wave of yours. Not that the atmosphere matters when the work is good, but it is especially welcome to have a cheerful, friendly shop and expert attention besides. And their waves are superb. I heard that Mrs. Keefe was with Miss Lynch, and ran up to [illegible] her welcome. Sure enough, it is the same Mrs. Keefe whose following was so large among our very own friends at her former location. And you know her permanent waves are among the best in the city. They use the Frederics method, with the Vita-Tonic compound which insures the beauty, health and permanency of each lovely curl. You may have the wide flat wave now in vogue, or one just like a perfect marcel, whichever you wish for $15.00. Or you may follow the lead of one girl I saw whose head was a mass of golden ringlets in the soft, French curl. And that is the prettiest of all.

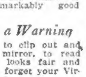
'As Long 'As

Hot weather calls for permanent waves, the Emilie Shop will be busy from morning to night. Dorothy and Emilie Brady only opened up this shop last fall, but they brought a big clientele with them, and their reputation for unusual work has spread until it's rare indeed to find the shop not crowded. You see, they were the first in Boston to give the finger wave. In fact, it was their finger wave that has made it the vogue it is today. And one of their permanents, finished off with this wave is the nearest approach to natural grace and beauty you can find. I saw a girl having her hair waved today. The ends showed a soft baby curl that was the last of a permanent put in by Dorothy Brady seven months ago. And she said that she had enjoyed every day of it. But it is well to make an appointment, either by phoning Congress 1833, or Liberty 3411, or by calling personally at the shop on the sixth floor of the Blake Building, 59 Temple Place.

The Winds

Do blow in the hottest weather and the rains do fall. We never venture far without our coats. So here's the final clearance sale on coats at Silver's Specialty Shop, on the fifth floor of the Blake Building, 59 Temple Place. And oh! what welcome news it is—when word comes that Silver's best coats are down to $15, $25 and $35. Coats which a few weeks ago were selling fast at $45 and $69, with the very lowest at $29.50. Think of a heavy crepe satin, with a long collar of monkey fur, for $35; a coat of Jovella cloth and squirrel trimming, Kasha with a broadtail collar and other rich, rare models. Two or three coats in sizes 46 and 48 are now $25 and the sport coats and novelty tweeds are closing out at $15. Those dresses there at $13.75 are remarkably good values, too.

'And Here's a Warning



That you want to clip out and paste on your mirror, to read every day that looks fair and warmer. "Don't forget your Virozol." Virozol Swedish face bath is more necessary to your picnic equipment than hard boiled eggs or the thermos bottle. It is more vital to your happiness than a new bathing suit, and it is absolutely essential to keep your skin cool and clear when the sun gets hot. By patting on the face bath you can keep congestion out of the pores and the muscles from relaxing. With the Swedish Almond Cream you can offset the drying of natural oils by the sun. And the relief of it after a day on the shore is worth twice the cost. After all, Virozol Swedish Face Bath is but $1.25 and the Almond Cream only $1.00, so run in to Filene's and order them now, and they will be on hand when the family wants them.

What Is Lactay?

Lactay, my dear, is the scientific method of "putting your skin on a milk diet." It is the supreme accomplishment of the Barbara Baylie preparations, combining the nourishing properties of milk with the curative properties of the finest vegetable oils. Thus we have a lotion which cleanses the pores, stimulates the tissues and nourishes them as well. In fact, it is really a liquid cold cream, so properly balanced and scientifically compounded that the most delicate skins bloom into the radiance of health. Put up in its own diminutive milk bottle, sealed and labeled in the green of the fields and trees, with the white creamy lotion so tempting that you want to dip in at once and refresh yourself. And featured this week at Conrad's toilet goods department, on Winter Street, at $1.00 a bottle.

Last Week

I told you about the Van Buren Shop, at 259 Tremont Street—with its wealth of Parisian imports, copies of imports and lovely Fifth Avenue models. And didn't you find every word of it true? Didn't you love the dainty little styles and the exquisite originality of them? Yet not one in the shop was over $32.50 and many were around $12.50 and $14.75.

Well, listen to this—they are now holding a clearance sale in their Wellesley Shop, the "Chic Maid Shop" at 63 Central Street. A grand clearance sale with everything cut way down. So this is one of those times when it pays to hop into your car and take a trip through the beautiful Wellesleys, out to this shop. And when you get there, you'll realize why Wellesley has one of the most popular colleges in the country.

Faithfully yours,

Priscilla

CROSSINGS TO BE DISCUSSED TOMORROW

The question of greater safeguards for the public at grade crossings—the need for which was pointed out by the Boston Evening American—will be taken up tomorrow at a meeting of the State Public Utilities Commission.

The commission will take under consideration especially the offer of Public Works Commissioner William F. Williams to install highway blinkers near the crossings at State expense, provided the railroads are required to erect more automatic safety lights.

Railroad officials will be called in for interviews by the commission and Commissioner Williams will also attend the meeting, as will Registrar of Motor Vehicles Frank A. Goodwin.

As a means of forcing motorists to take more precautions in crossing railroad tracks, the possibility of recommending the strict enforcement of a little known statute may also be considered.

Public Utilities Commissioner Everett E. Stone unearthed the statute, which is section 15 of Chapter 90, reading as follows: "Every person operating a motor vehicle, upon approaching a railroad crossing at grade, shall reduce the speed of the vehicle to a reasonable and proper rate, and shall proceed cautiously over the crossing.

COOLIDGE WILL DRAFT FARM RELIEF BILL

Rapid City, S. D., June 20 (I.N.S.)—President Coolidge, according to all indications, will leave the Black Hills of South Dakota this Fall with a draft of a farm relief bill in his pocket which will satisfy a great number of the farmers of the West, or, at least, be of such a nature as to be palatable.

Summering here in the heart of the region that fought so vigorously for the vetoed McNary-Haugen bill with its equilization fee and alleged "price-fixing" features, the President already apparently has made long strides toward winning over the Western agrarians.

Perhaps the first major convert to the administration viewpoint is Senator Norbeck. The South Dakota political leader voted for the McNary-Haugen bill, but the President's decision to Summer here probably will make it difficult for him to oppose the Coolidge program in the next session of Congress.

The importance of formulating an acceptable compromise farm program has been impressed on the President quite forcibly. Just before his departure from Washington he invited Governor Hammill of Iowa to the White House.

"Iowa," said Hammill at the time, "will be for President Coolidge for re-election in 1928, provided he works out a broad-hand satisfactory program of relief which will pass the next session of Congress, otherwise, Iowa regards Lowden in a very friendly fashion." Consequently, agricultural relief is expected to come in for a big play before the Summer is over.

ENLARGE FILENE SERVICE PLANT

A small army of workers is busy on the foundation of the addition to the Filene service building on the Charles River Esplanade in Cambridge, the present building, though only seven years old, having already proved inadequate to house the growing business of the big Boston store.

One of the chief features of the addition, to be built on the plot of land adjoining the present structure will be the great modern vault for the storage of furs, which will have a capacity to store $10,000,000 worth of goods. The new building, which will have a ground area of 16,000 square feet, will cost $425,000.

The first floor of the new building will be devoted to delivery, and will take care of many more trucks than are now in service.

The new addition will make it possible to have separate entrances in the old building for patrons who wish to take their furs from storage so that the furs can be taken from the vaults while the customer waits thereby preventing the delays that are now inevitable.

NINE FALL IN PLANE SIMILAR TO BYRD'S

Passaic, N. J., June 20 (A.P.)—News of the miraculous escape of nine persons when a three-motored Fokker plane similar to that in which Commander Byrd plans his Paris flight, crashed to death near Teterboro, became public today.

Samuel Cohen, one of the passengers, who said he paid $5 to be taken up, late Saturday afternoon, declared that the plane fell from a height of about 100 feet and that all nine persons aboard escaped with minor injuries. The machine was wrecked, he said.

The pilot of the plane was Captain C. H. Biddlecomb, of the Colonial Air Transport Company, and the crash was caused by engine trouble.

Story of the Tea Leaves

As you linger over a grateful cup of delicately flavored Formosa tea or an enticing brew of golden orange pekoe, did you ever stop to realize the romance that surrounds this beverage? We look at the tea leaves lying shrivelled and inert waiting the magic touch that will release their appealing goodness, but we seldom give a thought to the conditions under which they grew, were harvested and finally shipped to our stores.

Yet there is no article that we enjoy as a beverage that carries with it more beauty in its natural setting, more charm in its cultivation, more human interest than does tea from the foreign climes.

All the tea which you and I may purchase at our grocer's comes from one kind of plant which is fundamentally the same everywhere —any difference being traceable to climate, soil and method of curing. It is known under different names, depending upon the country in which it is grown, the position of the leaf on the twig and the treatment of the leaf after it is picked. This tea is grown exclusively on the rugged terraces of Japan, in the beautiful gardens of China, away up on the clayey hillsides of Northern Formosa, on a belt of land ridged on each side by chains of great mountains—in picturesque India, close to the everlasting snows of the Himalayas and on the plantations of Ceylon and Java.

These teas are of two kinds—green and black. The green teas are not allowed to ferment in the process of curing while black teas are fermented. Japan produces only unfermented (green tea), while China produces both black and green. Ceylon, India and Java produce chiefly black tea.

Formosa produces a semi-fermented tea, that is, the process of exposure to the air before firing is not carried so far as in the case of fully fermented teas. Formosa tea is black in color, however. The tea blend of northern Formosa flourishes in a temperature never above 82 degrees F. in Summer nor below 53 degrees F. in Winter which accounts for the lilac flavor found nowhere else that I know of where tea is grown. Unlike most teas Formosa tea requires three or four minutes of rapid boiling to bring out its delicious flavor.

Ceylon teas, known as "Orange Pekoe," derive this name from the Assam district in India where the tea leaves are tipped with a golden orange color. Orange pekoe is not a variety of tea but simply a grade of Ceylon, India and Java teas.

Harvesting the tea leaves is practically the same in all countries. Only the young leaves of the blend are picked and these are nipped by hand—a few leaves at a time.

In order to make this easy to do, the tea plants which ordinarily would grow into trees 30 or 40 feet tall if left unpruned are trimmed back and kept at a height of 3 to 4 feet so that the harvesters can work standing on the ground.

The curing of tea is brought about through the application of artificial heat to the leaves. This is known as basket firing and pan firing. The receptacles in which the tea is handled may be the wicker basket of Japan, with a platform separating it from the charcoal fire underneath, or it may be the automatic machinery of Ceylon and India in which the leaves are spread on revolving trays which continually approach and recede from the fire. In curing fermented (black) tea, after the fermentation has been continued long enough, the leaf is "fired" and fermentation stopped. In curing unfermented or green tea, fermentation is prevented by the prompt application of artificial heat which immediately closes the pores of the leaves permitting them to retain the elements produced by the soil.

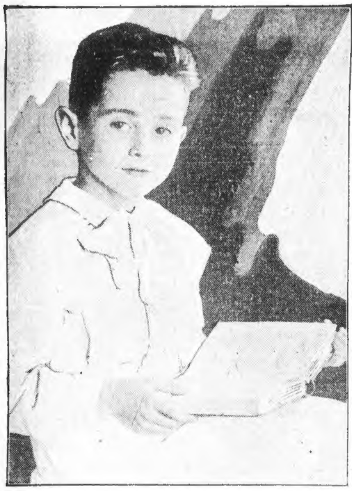
He Loves it Above all Others



"Bond Bread has been a perfect body-builder for my son," says Mrs. Joseph Kelley of Roxbury.

"Its perfect texture, wholesome ingredients and appetizing flavor have made him love it above all other bread, even home-made. My table is never set without Bond Bread."

That is the opinion of the mother of 12-year-old Robert shown above.

Just 8 years ago, 6405 Boston housewives brought samples of their home-baked bread to Tremont Temple to show us the kind of bread they wanted for themselves and their children. Being frankly copied from the best of these 6405 loaves, Bond Bread quickly became Boston's most popular bread.

Why is it that after 8 years of unparalleled popularity, Bond Bread now enjoys an even greater demand than ever before in its history?

Because day after day for 8 long years, Bond Bread has been uniformly home-like. Its splendid flavor comes from its pure ingredients—ingredients every bit as pure and choice as you yourself would use. Its healthfulness comes largely from its thorough baking. This thorough baking is what makes it so firm and close-textured, as well as so flavorful.

Every day more and more housewives realize it pays to discriminate in bread. They have tried them all and have convinced themselves that a home-like, healthful bread, like Bond, is the greatest bargain a woman can buy.

Berry Season Well On

THREE cheers! The native strawberry season has opened and for the next few weeks we can indulge in strawberry tarts, shortcakes, ice cream, strawberries and cream, and just plain unhulled strawberries dipped in powdered sugar. Cantaloupes are good and bananas are cheap.

Native greens, spinach, and kale are plentiful and low priced. Standard bunches of native asparagus vary from 15c for small stalks to 40-50c for large stalks, green from the tip to butt. Bunched beets from nearby are good and so are nearby lettuce.

Eggs show but little change in price. Nearbys are 45c and 49c and the extra fancy ones a bit higher.

Fresh killed roosters, good for casserole dishes, are only 23-26c a pound. Most of the chickens offered are cold storage and most of the fowl fresh killed.

Save Time in Searching for Dust-Cloth—A three-pocket holder of oilcloth, which is hung in the cleaning closet, is a very simple and economical way of keeping dust cloths always ready for use.

Salads Come Easier

SPRING time is certainly salad time, and isn't it a great and glorious feeling to realize that, thanks to the delicious ready prepared dressings now on the market, salads are but the work of a jiffy.

If you are not already acquainted with the best of these dressings, do drop in to the Martha Lee Kitchen and sample the kind you'll find in our ice box.

And then let us tell you about the materials that we know go into its manufacture. I'll guarantee that the big brown eggs that I've seen broken into the huge mixing containers are fresher than the ones in your ice box this minute, and the other ingredients are proportionately nigh class.

We carefully treasure every half cupful of left over vegetables, such as string beans, peas, asparagus, beets, etc., as well as stray bits of salmon, mackerel, roast beef or lamb. We dilute some of our favorite dressing with a little mild vinegar, mix this up with our collection and set on ice for an hour or so.

Just before serving we drain off any surplus moisture, arrange on beds of crisp lettice, and top with a whirl of dressing. With a serving of piping hot French fried potatoes on the side, and accompanied by an iced drink, what more could man—or woman—ask for a luncheon or even sultry-evening dinner?

Save Repapering Entire Wall—To repair wall paper instead of cutting a square piece to fit the place which needs patching, tear out a piece in irregular form. Place it on the wall, being careful to match all lines and figures. By doing this the patch can scarcely be detected.

Hungarian Goulash

Saute a large onion, cut in slices, in two tablespoonfuls of salt pork fat. Add one pound and a half of lean veal, cut in inch cubes and cook until meat is slightly browned. Add two cups of boiling water, a pepper pod fine cut, and three-fourths a teaspoonful of caraway seed. Let simmer two hours, adding more water, if necessary. There should be at least one cup of liquid in the pan when the cooking is completed. Season with salt also pepper, if needed, and thicken with a little flour and water, mixed smooth.

Your Home and You.—Four cups of flour equal one pound.

In making fish cakes have your potatoes dry.

Conserve of Rhubard

IF the rhubarb is old, and is to be cut on a slicing machine, it should first have the skin removed. If it is to be sliced by hand, it may be scraped to remove the outer thin layer. To each pound of sliced rhubarb, add 1 medium size orange, ¼ pound of seedless raisins, 2 ounces of walnut meats and one pound of sugar.

The orange should be cut into suitable-sized pieces and run through a food chopper, using the fine cutter. If a pronounced bitterish flavor is undesirable, discard the peel from half the orange. Chop the raisins and nuts, using the medium cutter of the food chopper. Blanch the rhubarb for thirty seconds to one minute in boiling water. Place the rhubarb, the chopped orange and raisins together with the sugar and a half cup of water, into the cooking vessel. Heat slowly until the sugar is dissolved, then boil rapidly until finished. The finishing point is somewhat difficult to determine, owing to the presence of the orange. When the drops of juice tend to cling for some time to the spoon, the conserve is done and should be filled boiling hot into clean glass jars and sealed at once. After twenty-four to forty-eight hours, it should have a good spreading consistency, with no free liquid separating from the solids.

SIMPLICITY is the keynote of success in hot weather cookery, but because meals are simple is no reason that they should not furnish an adequate amount of nourishment to fuel the human engine efficiently.

Every person in the world is the fireman who feeds his own furnace, and in ninety nine cases out of a hundred he selects his food without the slightest regard to its fuel value. Some fuel food is composed chiefly of fat making material, some of it makes muscle and bone and some of it supplies energy and heat without making tissue.

One of our most valuable fuel foods is that universal cereal, shredded wheat, now eaten in every portion of the habitable globe. This perfect food contains all the elements in exactly the right proportion to build a perfect human body and supply all the energy we need for our day's work.

Physicians tell us that we should take two ounces a day of cellulose, that woody fibre that serves as the whisk broom of the stomach. Bran is one of the best forms of cellulose, and in two shredded wheat biscuits you get at least three heaping tablespoonfuls of bran combined with the rich, nurtritive elements of the whole grain, making a perfect, complete food.

One of the most attractive, delicious and common sense Summer breakfast dishes is crushed fruit served in shredded wheat baskets, floating in creamy milk. The longing for fresh fruits and berries in Summer is a natural one, and a sure indication that the body needs that kind of food.

Combined with the shredded wheat biscuits this ideal fuel food will leave no clinkers, slate or slag that will make it difficult to get up enough steam for the day's work.

I crush my berries the night before, sprinkle them with a little confectioner's sugar, and set them in the ice box to "mull" until morning. Then, while the coffee is perking, I hollow out my shredded wheat biscuits into little baskets, removing some of the shreds.

Then I pop them into the oven for a minute or two to get thoroughly warm, ready to be filled with my chilled berries, and served with cream or top milk.

Do try this on your family tomorrow, and I'll guarantee you'll bless me for a timely tip on the ideal hot weather breakfast.

Save "Mother" From Forming in Vinegar—Every housekeeper knows how difficult it is to keep vinegar bottles clear and free of the cloudy substance known as "mother." Adding half a teaspoon of salt to your vinegar cruet each time you fill it with vinegar will remedy the difficulty.

Red Devil's Food

FOR red devil's food take 1 cup sugar, ¼ cup shortening, 2 eggs, 2 squares bitter chocolate, ½ cup sour milk, ½ cup boiling water, 1½ cups cake flour, 1 teaspoon soda, 1 teaspoon vanilla, ½ teaspoon salt.

Sift flour once, measure, add salt, and sift three times.

Cream shortening, add sugar gradually. Add beaten eggs and beat hard. Stir in sour milk and flour alternately. Add melted chocolate to the boiling water; stir quickly, and add soda while mixture is boiling hot. Stir until thickened and add last to the cake mixture. Add the vanilla, beat hard; bake 40 minutes in a moderate oven about 325 degrees to 350 degrees F.

A white porcelain bathtub that has grown brown, may be cleaned by the use of turpentine applied with a flannel cloth.

Advice to the Bride

BECAUSE one is a girl, it does not naturally follow that one is an expert cook. The young bride who firmly believes that her affection for her husband is going to make her fingers deft at handling pastries lightly, usually has a sad awakening before her. The only road to good cooking is knowledge and practice.

At the present high cost of material it behooves every little lady who means to be a real help to study foods and cookery points before starting on her term of household management.

One substantial dish that she can hardly go wrong on is a ham or part of a ham spiced and baked for dinner. This will afford meat for several meals.

Buy a ham put out by a house that sells United States Government inspected meats. Select one of the hams in the sanitary covering. They are juicy, tender and sweet and are economical, as the slices do not crack.

Simmer a ten-pound ham or a half ham for two hours. Remove the skin. Rub brown sugar into the fat, insert two dozen cloves here and there in the fat and bake, basting often, until done, probably two hours baking will be sufficient.

With this, serve apple sauce, and rice or hominy would take the place of potatoes while the latter are high. This makes a hearty meal and can well be followed by a dessert of crackers, cheese and coffee.

Make a Spanish omelet for breakfast and a casserole ham dish for luncheon. It is advisable to have a different kind of meat for dinner the next night, but one of the many virtues of cooked ham is its keeping qualities and the infinite number of delicious ways in which it may be served.

Good Filling for Cake

DO try this Cocoanut Marshmallow Filling on your favorite cake:

Put one cup of sugar, three tablespoons water, and the white of one egg in the top of the double-boiler. While the water in the lower vessel boils, rapidly beat mixture steadily for seven minutes, using Dover beater.

Remove from heat, add one-half teaspoon vanilla, one-half cup marshmallow creme and one-half cup canned cocoanut and beat with a large spoon until the right consistency to spread. Sprinkle more cocoanut over the top of the cake—after you have iced it.

Swedish Sponge Cake That's Easy to Make

Beat, separately, the whites and yolks of four eggs. Beat one cup of sugar into the yolks, then add half a cup of potato flour sifted with three-fourths a level teaspoonful of cream of tartar, one-fourth a teaspoonful of soda, and one-fourth a teaspoonful of salt.

Add, lastly, two teaspoonfuls of lemon extract and the whites of the eggs. Bake in a moderate oven forty minutes. This recipe using potato flour makes a very tender sponge cake.

"Chipso more than helps in dishwashing—it practically does away with it!" says this Somerville woman

For Chipso is one-third quicker!

"I soak the dishes clean in hot Chipso suds," says Mrs. J. H. Czock of Somerville, Mass., in a recent letter to us. "Then I stack them in the drain, dry the glasses and silver, and leave the rest with the comfortable assurance that they will dry without streaks since they have been washed in Chipso."

Mrs. Czock saves herself an enormous amount of work this way. She uses the ideal Chipso method.

But Mrs. Frank Mosher of Petersboro, N. H., has a somewhat different time-saving angle.

"I keep a small muslin bag filled with Chipso flakes at the sink," Mrs. Mosher writes. "A few swishes and you get a quick suds. It's not wasteful, for what you don't use jells in the bag, and often comes in handy when you want to make suds in lukewarm or cold water. If you want to make the first show at the movies, here is my S. O. S. method: Soak your dishes in hot Chipso suds while you're gone." She's right—there will be practically nothing to do but the rinsing when you come back!

Of course, we recommend pouring hot water over the dry Chipso flakes. You don't have to beat up the suds, then. But both Mrs. Mosher and Mrs. Czock have the right idea of letting Chipso soak off the grease—rather than rubbing needlessly. It saves hands. It saves time. For the Chipso way is at least one-third quicker than the old way!

Millions of women have decided they want the new half hour a day that Chipso gives them! A day's dishwashing costs less than a penny when you buy the big 25-cent box of Chipso.

BETTY ALDEN'S COMMENT ON SOCIETY

"Raceland's" Opening Voted Large Success; Score Another Triumph for John R. Macomber

THE CONSENSUS OF OPINION IS THAT "RACELAND'S" inaugural of racing was a "perfect" occasion. And that John R. Macomber, Raceland's owner and host for the day, is a host par excellence. Certainly the superlatives trip off the tongue with ease in describing this enormous hospitality. To begin with, the day was flawless. And "Raceland" is marvellously attractive, in its setting of rolling countryside. The course, for both flat and steeplechase, has been laid out by master hands with due regard for the picturesque and the vision of the spectators. The card of races was a thriller and the trophies provided therefor the envy of all beholders.

MAKING THE DAY PLUS-PERFECT, MR. MACOMBER'S privileged guests to the number of several hundred sat themselves down to a luncheon al fresco that was the finished expression of what a master chef can achieve and would have charmed an epicure. Although such a magnificent hospitality made the opening of "Raceland" a day of days in sport annals. Certainly not for many a moon to come will such an occasion have an equal, and not for many a moon in the past has it been ever approached. Even the Macomber horses felt it was a day of days and made three wins—Crystallete, Trieve and Bashdon.

TO THE OLD TIMER AND REAL RACING FAN BUT ONE DETAIL was lacking. The coach and four. When Race days hereabouts include a dozen or more shining coaches and their spanking teams and trappings then will the heart of the onlooker rejoice, for then indeed will the sport of kings have come back into all its old time glory. Certainly, in sundry coach houses of the sporting set, may be found several of these equipages reposing in isolated splendour. Let them be brought out and refurbished to adorn the picture as only coaches can on Race days. For truly it is the toot of the coach horn and not of the motor that fittingly accompanies an event where Horse is King and Society his adoring subject.

ONE SEES THE MISSES RUTH AND DOROTHY NEYHART SO frequently in riding kit and so infrequently in garden frocks that their appearance in the latter, as at Raceland, is doubly pleasing. Both young girls wore wide summery hats and summery frocks of printed crepes, and both were of tremendous assistance to Mr. Macomber in staging the details of the affair. Mrs. Augusta Macomber, in gray chiffon and poppy red hat, was a third on whom the host depended to see that wheels ran smoothly.

FOR A RACE DAY NOTHING COULD HAVE BEEN MORE fetching attire than Mrs. Arthur Derby's yellow and brown costume. The former Miss Jeannette Barr wore a yellow frock, and perfectly enormous yellow straw chapeau without adornment save for a narrow velvet band about the crown. Cowboy-wise she wore about her shoulders one of those silken squares that have the moment's high favor. It gave a touch of swagger to a quite delightful costume. She was at the Augustus F. Goodwin table for luncheon. Mrs. Goodwin was smart in printed crepe. Mrs. William L. Hirst of Philadelphia was in pale gray with hat of black and Miss Frances Goodwin's bright dark eyes looked out on the thrilling scene from beneath a snug visca of tan. Miss Betty Moulton was in blue, just the blue of her eyes.

GENERAL FRANCIS APPLETON'S INJUNCTION TO THE luncheon company "to take their chairs" (and their luncheons) with them if they wished to see the first race, was laughingly received, and followed out as to the first portion. The General was at the same table with B. Nason Hamlin and Mrs. Hamlin and the I. Tucker Burrs, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. I. Tucker Burr, senior, had General Clarence R. Edwards about their board. Nearby was a group that included Mrs. Charles Goddard Weld, the Sumner Pingrees and Miss Ella deT. Snelling, Miss Grace Cushing, in a radiant costume of King's blue-frock, hat and shoes, and Miss Harriet Morse, made an interesting duo at luncheon.

TO RECOUNT EVERYONE WHO WAS AT RACELAND LUNCHEON is to recount practically the entire Eastern Horse Club membership, together with its sons and daughters. It was a gathering distinctly smart and in this case (as in so many other instances) the word "smart" and the word "horsey" are synonymous. The Birds, the Wests, the Saltonstalls (Mrs. "Dick" wore a striking bright red lace frock), the Danielson, the Vaughans, Mrs. F. Lothrop Ames, the Princes (both Frederick and Gordon), the Ayers, the Warrens and the Tuckermans all were there, to say nothing of the young girl set that was out in all its summery glory, attended by most ardent swains.

PRETTY MISS MARY LOUISE ALMY WHO NEVER MISSES A race day, either as spectator or participant, wore a becoming frock and hat of violet and later, after the races had run all their thrilling course tooled the family motor down to Westport for a merry week-end. Mr. and Mrs. Robert B. Almy (Rosamond Adie) did likewise. The Almys last named have a charming farmhouse for their Summer home down at Barney's Joy, a portion of the wide domaine of William Almy who is lord of the manor of Quansett. It was Quansett Cup which Crystallete won at the Country Club on Friday, and it is the Quansett Hunt which furnishes spirited meets down in the southwestern corner of the State every Autumn to a chosen few of the Almy intimates.

142 SENIORS IN CLASS DAY AT RADCLIFFE

Rain failed to dampen the enthusiasm of the 142 members of the graduating class of Radcliffe, as they participated in the annual Class Day exercises of the college in Agassiz House today.

The exercises, ordinarily held out doors, were moved into the theatre of the house. The theatre was crowded with friends and relatives of the fair graduates, while the graduates of former days met in class reunions, held picnics and otherwise enjoyed themselves, unmindful of the weather.

The class president, Miss Martha Hale, presided at the exercises. The gift of the class to the college, an antique Spanish lowboy which will be placed in Agassiz house, was presented by Miss Charlotte Kennedy.

The class poem was read by Margaret Kahn, while the class history was read by Miss Dorothea Sibley. The class will was read by Miss Wilhelmina Wallace, while the class gifts were distributed by Miss Lydia Edwards.

The concluding activity of the day will be a senior spread, to be held in Agassiz House tonight. This will be presided over by Miss Minerva Caldwell of West Medford.

The most important class reunion was the silver anniversary of the class of 1902. Miss A. Natalie Jewett of Winchester, the class secretary, was active in the program, as was Dr. Fannie Ferne Andrews of Boston, who is one of the only three women who have ever been awarded degrees as authorities on international law.

The members of the class of '12 have arranged for a night at Pops, at Symphony Hall, tonight. The class of 1917 is disporting with a "Baby Show" at Barnard Hall; the class of 1921 is enjoying a picnic at the home of Mrs. Josiah Wheelwright at Cohasset, while the class of 1926 is enjoying a picnic at the home of Miss Marjorie Morse, in Cambridge.

GRADS MEET AT WELLESLEY

Wellesley College today was the scene of the most colorful alumnae reunion in its history. Seven hundred and fifty women, representing 11 former classes, and accompanied by daughters and nieces, participated in the ceremonies.

The oldest class to be represented was that of 1882, of which Mrs. Reid Carpenter was chairman. There were six members of that class present.

The prize for the most outstanding costume went to the class of 1902, which also celebrated its 25th reunion. The members wore wide trimmed "coolie" helmets and their dresses were of nine shades and nine patterns.

The 1902 "class daughter" was Miss Harriet Hardy of Baltimore, president of next year's senior class and the "class niece" was Miss Helen Dyson of Hazelton, Pa., president of the 1927 juniors.

Honors for the greatest representation went to the class of 1922 which had 130 present.

The Adventures of Robinson Crusoe — By Daniel Defoe

Robinson Crusoe, the son of well-to-do parents, was born at York, England, in 1632. As a child he longed to go to sea, but his father advised against it and told him the roving life can bring only unhappiness. However, at the age of nineteen, he ran away from home and became a sailor.

The ship was wrecked, but he escaped with his life. On his next voyage the ship was captured by a Turkish rover and he was sold into slavery. He was a slave for two years until he managed to escape in a small boat and was picked up by a Portuguese captain, who landed him in Brazil.

In Brazil he went into partnership with some other men and established a plantation. But he and his partners needed slaves to work the plantation, so he was persuaded to set out on a trip to Africa to obtain the black men. He left all his possessions in the care of his partners.

The ship soon ran into bad weather and was driven from its course. It ran aground at night. The crew took to the small boats, but the boats were overturned in the heavy seas. Crusoe swam desperately through the high surf and was finally washed up on an unknown shore. (Continued tomorrow.)

"Ankles Preferred" at the New Boston has nothing to do, you may be sure, with Wall Street.

Nevertheless business is business and besides how could Madge Bellamy as the heroine of this amusing farce [illegible] "the boys" cast a wandering eye at her hosiery?

LEATRICE JOY IN MELODRAMA AT MODERN

"Vanity" at the Modern and Beacon is a film that shows how many modern perils a girl like Margie or Nell or Sue can live through and still be what the song-writers call "a good little girl." Its redeeming quality is Leatrice Joy and perhaps a shot or two of fairly effective melodrama. At any rate, if the story is familiar Miss Joy's gowns are not. And these are what you might call the "features" of this bright star's cinematic entertainment.

Leatrice Joy

The high light of this preposterous "meller" is a bang-up, double action murder, occasioned by the heroine's being lured aboard the villain's steamboat, and having to resort to forceful measures for self protection.

To make matters worse this dreadful carnage takes place on the lady's wedding eve. And where was our hero all this time? It's hard on him but it must be admitted that he was "throwing" a bachelor party and drinking studio pop to the "most innocent and lovely flower in the world."

Never mind, it takes all kinds of movies to make a season. And besides, there is also a good Vitaphone program at the twin houses, including such artists as Anna Case, Van and Schenck, and the Metropolitan Opera House Chorus.

For further film thrills there is another Tom Mix picture, "The Outlaws of Red River," in which the star, "Tony" and Marjorie Daw are pleasantly involved with the Texas Rangers and typical romance of the border country.

BABE RUTH IN FILM DEBUT AT OLYMPIAS

George Herman Ruth, swat king, actor, and patron of the fine arts, is out to uplift the silent drama. To prove it he is on view this week at the Olympia, Scollay and Central Square Theatres as star, leading man and [illegible] of "When Babe Comes Home," a gay comedy of sport, love and laundry. The [illegible] portrays the [illegible] of one [illegible] baseball [illegible] the feminine heart with peculiar magnanimity—and many other noble qualities too numerous to mention.

Anna Q. Nilsson

Mr. Ruth's manly beauty is softly offset by the blonde and fetching Anna Q. Nilsson, seen as the girl of the laundry who [illegible] meet the untidy gentleman whose uniform arrives at her shop so thoroughly permeated with the dirt of the diamond.

To meet him and reform him is the lady's one mission in life, so she goes to the game to see the hero play—and receives a foul ball in the eye as a striking introduction.

Of course the Great Man goes in deep for romance, is amply rewarded with the smiles of the fair laundress, [illegible] and seems in a fair way to be reformed until the big game.

What follows is the usual thing in [illegible] the [illegible] apple in the general direction of Australia, and you can well imagine the rest.

"When Babe Comes Home" is bound to be popular. The genial star is quite a comedian at that. The [illegible] Lou[illegible]

Ruth Expects to Crack Home Run Record

BIG HITTER SAYS LEG IS O. K.

Rain Halts Opening Game, So the Sox and Yanks Play Two Tomorrow

SHOWERS put the locks on Fenway Park today, and the opening collision between the Red Sox and the Yankees was called off, and put over until tomorrow, when a double header will be staged. This was a bad break for the Carrigans, who were sure to have a big crowd present to watch Babe Ruth and the rest of the murderous Yanks.

The New Yorkers are showing the way in the race now seven games in front of the Chicago White Sox, and look like the surest kind of repeaters. The large Mister Ruth is having a merry battle with his home-run record and is getting a lot of real competition from Gehrig who is only a few homers back of him.

"I'LL break the record if my leg holds up," declared Ruth, the boy of the big bat at the Brunswick today.

"I wrenched my right leg swinging the other day," the Bam explained. "It's giving me a little trouble, but it is coming around all right."

"Are they pitching to you this year?" the Babe was asked.

"Yes," he answered. "More often than they have been anyhow. I get a ball I can hit now and then."

"Why is that?"

"Buster Gehrig," replied Babe. "He is hitting these days and the pitchers can't get out of the hole just by passing me. Gehrig is smacking that ball hard."

"Is the fact that Gehrig is hitting making you go a little faster?"

"Yep," came back Ruth.

Then the Babe predicted that the Yankees will win the pennant this year.

"I don't think anybody will catch us now," Ruth said. "We are out in front and going along all right. Our pitchers are holding up and the batters are hitting.

"Pennock, Hoyt and the others are turning in fine pitching. We are all in there every day doing our share."

Apart from the injured leg Ruth is in fine physical condition. He worked himself into shape during the Winter.

"I weigh 223 pounds now, which is about right for me. I plan to stay at that weight during the playing season."

Then Ruth started to think about home runs again. He may be a great movie hero, but nearest to his heart are his homers.

"I think I'll break the record," he declares. "If my knee holds up and if they continue to pitch to me now and then, I'll take a real shot at it."

THE Babe is having one of his big years, so the native fans will forget all about the dismal showing of the Sox against the western invaders. Mister Ruth is packing them in this season, and being ably aided and abetted by Lou Gehrig and the rest of the Huggins sluggers.

Gehrig, playing his second year as a regular, is giving Ruth a real battle, and making it evident that he intends to take the swatting throne as soon as the Babe abdicates.

Just now George Herman has nudged out 22 round trips, while Columbia Lou has registered 17.

Walker Capsizes Canoe to Save Children

Hampton Court, Eng., June 20 (A.P.).—Mickey Walker, American middleweight champion, who is to fight Tommy Milligan in London, June 30, had an experience which pleased him and a lot of people as w[illegible]. With his manager, J. Kearns, Mickey was in a canoe on the Thames when he suddenly discovered a boatload of women and children across his bow. He overturned the canoe, dove in and swam ashore. He was cheered by the crowd who realized that Mickey's prompt action prevented a possible disaster. The American middleweight was none the worse after a rubdown, but Trainer Teddy Hayes won't let Mickey on the river again.

TUNNEY WILL DEFEND TITLE SEPT. 10

New York, June 20 (I.N.S.).—Gene Tunney will defend his world's heavyweight title during the week of Sept. 5-10 against the winner of the Jack Sharkey-Jack Dempsey fight, according to the present plans of promoter Tex Rickard.

Indications today were that the bout would be held on Saturday, Sept. 10 at Soldiers' Field, Chicago, although Rickard still has offers from Baltimore and Philadelphia under consideration. New York City has been eliminated because the Yankee Stadium here will not be available.

Meanwhile Johnny Buckley, manager of Sharkey, announced he had accepted terms for his man to fight Dempsey on July 21 at Yankee Stadium.

Dempsey, it was learned, wants $400,000 or 40 per cent. of the gate. Rickard believes the former champion will accept his terms upon his arrival here tomorrow, however.

Because of the great interest aroused by Dempsey's comeback, Rickard believes his bout with Sharkey will draw a million-dollar gate. The promoter said he already is flooded with ticket applications from cities throughout the country.

Although the bout has not yet been definitely signed, Rickard is daily besieged for choice seats, and he has out-of-town requests from New Orleans, Chicago, Boston, Virginia, South Carolina and St. Louis. The promoter is confident this fight will draw a gate of $1,000,000.

Wilson Seeks Sparring Partners for Dempsey

New York, June 20 (A.P.).—Work of finding human targets for Jack Dempsey's "comeback" fists and a place for him to train was under way here today with the ex-champion expected tomorrow morning from the West.

Dempsey meets Jack Sharkey July 21 at the Yankee Stadium for the chance to fight Gene Tunney for the world heavyweight championship.

Dempsey's advance man, Gus Wilson, lost no time in looking up a sparring staff. Visiting Stillman's Gymnasium where Sharkey trained for the Jimmy Maloney fight, Wilson inquired about the availability of Carl Carter, negro heavyweight, Arthur Dekuh, Italian heavyweight, Jack Gagnon, New Bedford, Mass., heavyweight, and Leo Lomski, Coast light heavyweight.

Indications are that the ex-champion will train for Sharkey at Saratoga, N. Y., where he prepared for Firpo four years ago.

H-Y TIE WILL BE PLAYED OFF IN NEW YORK

New Haven, Ct., June 20.—Yale and Harvard baseball managements today signed an agreement to play off a possible tie in their annual series in New York City next Saturday at the Polo Grounds at 3:30 o'clock. Tickets for the game were printed today.

The Harvard nine arrives this afternoon and goes immediately to Yale Field for two hours' practice on the diamond, on which they will play tomorrow. Rain fell this morning and threatening weather prevailed all day.

Local predictions for tomorrow were that warmer and cloudy weather will greet the crowd of 12,000 people at the 155th game between the old rivals who will meet, with Yale leading, in the series that began in 1869 with a score of 81 to 73.

Head Coach Joe Wood of Yale said today that he would save J[illegible] Sawyer, Yale's pitching ace, for Wednesday's game in Cambridge. He favors using the vete[illegible] Holabird against the Crimson tomorrow, but the fine showing of Dudley Smith, the past fo[illegible] has placed him on almost [illegible] terms with Holabird.

Both will probably be used [illegible] the match. Holabird is [illegible] wild and if he starts issuing [illegible], will be derricked in favor of Smith, whose sweeping, wide drop-curve has baffled all nines recently.

Indications are that Dick Vaughan of Newton, Mass., has practically won the Yale captaincy for next year. He clinched the title by his home run and single Saturday at Princeton which batted home three of Yale's four runs.

Princeton press correspondents sent out a statement that Caldwell made the hits. Vaughan has won more games this Spring than any other two players on Yale by his timely hitting in crises. He is also a hockey star.

Jack Barbee, the only reliable moundsman in the entire Crimson pitching corps, will be Harvard's pitching choice tomorrow, while Henry Chauncey will be behind the bat.

The rest of the Crimson lineup is a bit uncertain, the competition between Donaghy and Sullivan at short-stop, Lord and Tobin at first base and Ellison and Jones in right field still remaining undecided, insofar as official information is concerned.

Although the 1927 Crimson nine's record is not so impressive as that of the 1926 aggregation, it is by far the best that has been achieved by a Crimson team since then.

How Babe Ruth First Happened to be Heard of

By GEORGE W. GRIMM.

Was Babe Ruth fated from birth to become the Home Run King, The Sultan of Swat, Savior of Baseball, and idol of a hundred million people?

Were the planets in proper conjunction on the day he was born? Or did his palm bear the lines that could lead him nowhere but to glory?

Is there a fate that makes great men out of some of us and failures of the rest?

Don't be silly.

Babe Ruth might have been as [illegible] the Baltimore [illegible] or a [illegible] had just as well [illegible] greatest hitter in the history of baseball.

We [illegible] wondered at times w[illegible] made [illegible] become a sport writer. We [illegible] been trying to fear [illegible] shape our destinies. So we [illegible] naturally [illegible] Babe [illegible] became a ball player and how he [illegible] to the dizzy heights of fame.

THE INSIDE STORY.

Here is the inside story. It is not Babe Ruth's story. It came from the man who played the role of fate in the life of Babe Ruth [illegible] brother,—and for the first time relates how baseball's idol happened to become a ball player.

Once upon a time, to give the story the proper introduction, there were two rival schools down in Baltimore. One was St. Mary's, the other St. Joseph's. These schools were bitter rivals, in the same way that Boston College and Holy Cross or Harvard and Yale are rivals. Each wanted to defeat the other in all athletic events, and there was great joy in one school, and great sorrow in the other, whenever a athletic contest took place.

Now it happened that there was at St. Joseph's a young [illegible] by the name of Ford Bernard Meadows. And he was good. So good, in fact, that Jack Dunn, owner of the Baltimore baseball club, wanted to secure him for his team.

Jack Dunn [illegible] St. Joseph's [illegible] saw [illegible] had charge of the [illegible] team.

"Brother," said Jack Dunn, "We'd like to have that young fellow Meadows for our team."

Brother Gilbert [illegible]

"GO GET RUTH."

"Listen," said Brother Gilbert, "you don't want Meadows. He isn't so good. If you're looking for a good pitcher, why don't you go over to St. Mary's School. They've got a pitcher over there by the name of Ruth who IS a pitcher."

Jack Dunn looked at Brother Gilbert quizzically.

"Go over and look at [illegible] you don't believe me [illegible] Gilbert. "He's the [illegible]

[illegible] ever seen Go[illegible] Meadows alone."

And Brother G[illegible] a victory f[illegible] Mary's with R[illegible] gone.

And so Jack Dunn [illegible] he journeyed over [illegible] Industrial School and [illegible] Ruth for the first time.

He was impressed [illegible] not by any [illegible] seen fate, but by an [illegible] who, to save a good p[illegible] own team, directed [illegible] over a rival hurler.

'Kiki' Cuyler Saves Bird While 37,000 Look On

Chicago, June 20 (A.P.)—When the Cubs were on their last Eastern trip a blackbird visited the press coop at Wrigley Field and built a nest there for her young. She did not know the Cubs were coming back. Yesterday while the Cubs were beating the Pirates in front of 37,000 people the mother took one of her young down on the field to teach it to fly.

The mother became frantic when the youngster was unable to fly off the greensward after flitting down there from the press coop. An important ball game was on, the park was jammed with people, baseballs were flying about and she feared they would kill the little blackbird.

The youngster tried hard to fly away with its mother, but could not get started. They were behind the catcher and over a bit towards first base. Finally Kiki Cuyler of the Pirates gently picked up the youngster and put it in the care of the bat boy.

Rowdy Baseball Displeases Fans

BALL PLAYERS SHOULD SLUG BASEBALLS ONLY

Nick Flatley

BOSTON baseball fans, much fairer than the general run of baseball enthusiasts, hope that Earl Smith, heavyweight catcher of the Pittsburgh Pirates, is ruled off the diamond for taking that sock at Dave Bancroft of the Braves Boston fans like the rough stuff in small doses. They're not namby-pamby or conservative. They can't see any fairness in the latest explosion of the excitable Mister Smith, however Banny weighs 150 soaking wet, while Smith tips the scales at something close to 200. As far as can be gathered from reports, the blow was one of those sneak affairs that catch the victim sound asleep and, incidentally, knock him that way. If Jack Sharkey took a full swing at Al Mello you would have the same situation. And nobody would try to justify that.

The athletes undoubtedly exchanged boiling words. Smith is the most talkative bird in baseball, and he doesn't pick his language. He has been in more frays than any modern ball player, and each time he gets mixed up it's more serious. There is no room in the modern game for the Smiths.

Baseball has been successful over the years because the tough element has been chased out and thuggery almost eliminated. The rowdy ball player is mostly a memory of the young days of the game.

Whatever the cause, there's no excuse for a big, burly chap stealing a punch at a little fellow. It isn't done—in baseball or any other sport. Judge Fuchs hit a popular key when he announced that he would quit the game if Smith wasn't properly punished.

President Heydler of the National League will have a lot of pressure to dodge. The Pittsburgh club is powerful, a favorite in the championship race, and Smith is a great asset. But the Boston owner has come to be one of the big men in baseball. He means what he says. President Heydler knows that, and knows that the league cannot afford to lose him.

Chances are that Smith's sentence will be so severe that athletes hereafter will think a dozen times before swinging fists at convenient chins.

LAZZERI DAY LOOKS LIKE LARGE OCCASION

TOMORROW will be a large day at Fenway Park Tony Lazzeri, slugging second baseman of the New York Yankees, will be honored by his fellow Italian-Americans. He is the first son of Sunny Italy who ever horned into a World Series, and his blood brothers are all excited.

They will make the welkin ring, and put on a real show at the ball yard. They have a reputation for doing this sort of thing right, and they promise that Tony's day will set a few new records in affairs of that kind.

The Yankee youngster is one of the wonders of present day baseball. He stepped into the picture last Spring, and immediately became a very important cog in a machine that rolled right into a championship. In this, his second big league season, he's admittedly one of the great infielders, and one of the game's most dangerous sluggers.

Tony has the Italian flair for the dramatic, as his home runs in the pinches prove. He's big enough to be a star in a galaxy that includes Babe Ruth, Herbie Pennock, et al. That takes class, and tells the world that the kid is a real wonder. The gang, Tony's, intend to tell it very vociferously tomorrow.

In a drear local season, the occasion sticks out like a real chance for a good time. It's your own fault, if you miss it.

DEMPSEY AND SHARKEY BOUT IS CERTAIN

Soldiers Field Chicago. Rickard told me that he will make no definite announcement on the spot of the Tunney battle until after he gets the Dempsey-Sharkey mill out of the way

"I'll admit it looks like Chicago for the big scrap," said Tex

Billy Gibson, Tunney's manager and Johnny Buckley told this writer today that it was already been decided that the championship battle will go to the Windy City

Soldiers Field Chicago has a seating capacity of 150,000 according to Rickard He said it would be an easy matter to draw more than $2,000,000 there.

STADIUM TOO SMALL

The Yankee Stadium can only care for 84,000 persons. With a $25 top the receipts would only go $1,200,000, which would be $600,000 less than was taken in at Philadelphia last September

Rickard does not believe the fans would go to Philadelphia again this year. He says Chicago is located perfectly for a championship battle and has the necessary train and hotel accommodations to handle a big crowd

Those New England fans who are planning to see Tunney defend his title in September had better start looking up the train schedules to Chicago.

Dempsey will arrive here tomorrow morning and will immediately go into conference with Rickard. With Sharkey in the fold, Rickard does not expect to have much trouble in getting Dempsey to sign on the dotted line.

TEX WAITS DEMPSEY.

Tex has a very good weapon to use against any exorbitant demands on the part of the former champion. He can tell him, if necessary, that Tunney is opposed to a Sharkey-Dempsey bout and that he wants Tex to immediately announce a Sharkey Tunney match. Rickard may tell Dempsey he will have to move quickly or he will be left out in the cold for this year

Gus Wilson, Dempsey's trainer, is already in town and is making arrangements for Jack to train at Saratoga Springs. He is also seeking sparring partners. This is sufficient in his preparations that he wants in his preparations that he 600 wants a fight his way to the championship

Meanwhile Tunney is at Speculator Lake New York, doing light training. He is of the opinion that Sharkey is the man he will have to face in his defense of his championship.

GENE WANTS SHARKEY.

Tunney's only fear is that the winner of the Sharkey-Dempsey bout will receive an injury which will interfere with his title bout in September. Gene would have liked to have seen Rickard discarded Dempsey and billed him with Sharkey. He figured such a move would have prevented an injury upsetting his own battle program

Rickard has already deposited $200,000 with a New York bank to guarantee that he will stage a Tunney bout this year. Tex was also supposed to name Gene's opponent on June 15. Tunney, it is said threatened to claim the $200,000 put up by Rickard and refuse to fight this year when Rickard failed to name his opponent on June 15.

Rickard then called the former marine's attention to the fact he had neglected to post a $50,000 forfeit which he is supposed to do under the terms of the contract for the bout. Gene then retreated to his literature Rickard leaves very few loopholes when dealing with the young business men of the fistic racket.

NORWOOD NINE OUT TO WIN FINAL GAME

With both Captain Donovan and Johnny Dixon ready to go to the hill, followers of the Norwood High nine are confident that the team will be victorious in the third and deciding game of its series with Cambridge Latin at University Heights Wednesday evening

Dixon pitched well enough to win the first game, and would have succeeded had his mates given him proper support Donovan did grab the decision in the second contest with an excellent performance. Neither one of these two pitchers has a more than even chance of winning the third game.

It is probable that Eddie Carney the little southpaw hurler, who pitched Cambridge Latin to victory in the opener will be called upon to hurl the final game.

Herb McKinnon is ready to go in if called upon and all in all, the "Cantabs" appear to be as well off as their rival as far as pitching strength goes.

The game is to start at 5.30.

Golf Acts Like Spring of Perpetual Youth

By Jack Conway

"I AM convinced," said Mr. Boston laughingly, "that the little blonde salesgirl knew what she was talking about when she suggested that I get golf balls with elastics attached to them. I hope she secures somebody to back her idea about the elastics. It would save a great deal of the wear and tear on novice golfers

Ever since I made that fishing trip to New Hampshire some of my friends have been urging me to say something about the ancient game of golf

Golf,' says Bill Grimes, "has got baseball, boxing, football and hockey pushed right off the boards. You get exercise yourself playing golf, while you merely get headaches paying high prices to watch other people get exercise in most other sports

Mr. Boston

"I'll agree with Bill when he says one gets exercise playing golf. I found that out when I advanced on the Cohasset Golf Club Nick Flatley talked so fluently with Frank McNamara the club's pro, that we were handed the freedom of the links.

"Bill Meanix, English High school coach and former star all-round athlete, was standing by the first tee when I launched my golfing experiment. He made some kind of a remark about the beauty of the course, and that it is not necessary to hit the turf with golf clubs in order to get low scores.

"NICK FLATLEY, being an expert golfer, was kind enough to tell me that the Cohasset Golf Club's course is one of the finest in New England. The fairways made a particular hit with the youthful Mister Flatley. I didn't receive much of an opportunity to check up on his graphic description of the fairways, for the only time I saw them was when I batted off from the tee. After my drive to either left or right field as the case might be, I marched and climbed through the rough.

"Bill Carrigan would have got a kick out of watching me send line smashes to right field. I would have been a perfect man on the hit and run play. Mister Flatley remarked that I was slicing the ball whatever that means. He also at times declared I had a fine hook when I would send the little white pill crashing into the left field stands.

"I am thankful to Frank McNamara for one thing. He has had a wire net placed over a brook which runs through one part of the course So if you only knock out a two-bagger instead of a triple, you don't have to put on a bathing suit to retrieve your ball

"The next time I see Frank I'm going to ask him to drop some kind of a net over the pond which is one of the beauty marks of the course I don't know what it is about these water holes, but somehow they knock me blooey. My ball landed ten feet from the pond and all I had to do was to close my eyes and tap it and it would have landed on the other side of the pond

"I closed my eyes all right, but I topped the ball and it glided gracefully into the pond. Nick Flatley wagered a couple of bottles of champagne that I would also knock the next ball into the water hole Just so as to collect the champagne, I whanged the ball up to the next green.

"I WOULD suggest to the ground keepers of our various golf courses that they place high backstops around all the greens and that they put nets over the traps. I often had difficulty hitting the ball for any great distance when doing my sharpshooting from a tee, but once I was close to the green I could hit them a mile. With high backstops, I wouldn't have had to play the ball back half a mile or so.

"Anyhow I finally finished the 18 holes only to find that somebody had placed a bubbling water fountain at the nineteenth hole

"'Golf,' said the genial Mister McNamara, 'is the coming game of America. All the youngsters are now playing it They gain health and money while acting as caddies. Later the caddies become pros and do very well, thank you.

"'Golf is the ideal game for the business man. It keeps him out in the open and gives him the kind of exercise he does not get sitting in a leather chair at a mahogany desk. Life, at the best, is not very long Why not prolong it from 10 to 20 years by playing golf?'

"I guess Mac is right. So I'm a golfer from now on. I'm going to drop in and see that little blonde salesgirl today and ask her to get me some golf balls with elastics on them That will take care of the problem of getting tangled up in the rough"

"Fore! Honest, buddy, I'm beginning to use that golf language just as though it was my native tongue."

NORWOOD HIGH AND CAMBRIDGE LATIN 3RD GAME WEDNESDAY

TILDEN IS VICTOR OF MATCH

Hunter Also Survives First Round Play, Defeating Y. Ohts

Wimbledon, Eng., June 20 (A.P.).—William T. Tilden, American star, opened his bid for the Wimbledon lawn tennis singles championship today by racing through the first round in forty minutes to win from G. A. Pratt of England in straight sets at 6—2, 6—1, 6—0.

Although playing what seemed to be rather careless tennis, Tilden took the first set from Pratt 6—2. He made four double faults during the set. [illegible] Manchester [illegible] as strong as ever.

Speeding up his game and playing sounder tennis, Tilden won the second set 6—1. Pratt gave him feeble opposition.

For the first time since the World War a German player appeared at Wimbledon today. O. Froitzheim, the pre-war international player, [illegible] the Scottish champion. [illegible] won the first two sets by [illegible] volleying and [illegible] placements 7—5, 6—[illegible] [illegible] the third set 6—3.

Froitzheim [illegible] the [illegible].

Takeichi Harada of Japan, No. 3 in the American [illegible] ranking, was eliminated by Pierre Landry of France in a [illegible]. The score was 4—6, 6—4, 1—6, 6—1, 6—[illegible].

The defeat of Harada by the fifth ranking French player was the first surprise of the tournament. The styles of both players are similar. Each relied on [illegible] driving and stayed close to the base line. It was a case of the Frenchman outsteadying the Japanese.

YANKEE YOUTH MAKES HIT.

The appearance of the American schoolboy, Sidney B. Wood, for his match with the formidable Rene La Coste caused some merriment among the rather somnolent stands. Young Wood was arrayed in plus fours and striped golf stockings.

Undismayed by the reputation of his opponent, who is ranked here as the world's foremost player, he attacked courageously, while the stands cheered.

Young Wood provided much amusement for the crowd, which cheered every point he scored against the taciturn LaCoste. The match was in the centre court and the spectators remained for it, even forsaking the usual afternoon tea.

LaCoste won the first set 6—1 and the second set 6—3, Wood receiving an ovation when he led during the second set 2—1.

LACOSTE WINS MATCH

Wood, however, went down quickly in the third set 6—1. Cameramen rushed around the American player and snapped him from all angles, while the spectators pleased with his showing against LaCoste, gave him an enthusiastic sendoff.

LaCoste failed to play his usual relentless game and appeared greatly amused at the earnest endeavors of his youthful adversary. The French star, who is usually sombre of countenance, seemed to get more enjoyment out of this match than any he has ever contested and broke all records for "LaCoste smiles."

"Not so long ago I was a schoolboy myself," said LaCoste, "I know how it feels."

Watson M. Washburn, veteran American internationalist, was eliminated by Hans Timmer of Holland at 6—1, 8—6, 8—6.

Francis T. Hunter, the American star, defeated Y. Ohta of Japan 6—1, 6—4, 6—3.

Jacques Brugnon and Henri Cochet of France and Karl Kozeluh of Czecho-Slovakia also safely passed the first round. Up to this point all the "seeded" players except Harada had been successful.

Manchester, June 19—The Cantab Cats of Cambridge defeated the Manchester Wildcats, 3 to 2, in a 12-inning tussle at Barry Field today. The game was a seesaw affair throughout.

Three double plays by the visiting team saved the game on three occasions. The Wildcats also worked a double play to the fielding features.

Inside Golf

By CHESTER HORTON

In any swing, wood or iron, you must of course avoid dipping the knees (Fig. 1). Every now and then, when things go bad, check yourself up on that fault. It gets into the swing without the player knowing it because the knees are not accustomed to resisting so much down pressure. It's like mountain climbing. You get short of breath going up, but coming down the knees give way, and for that same reason it is easy to get into the habit of letting the knees break downward when you begin to put pressure into the bottom arc of the forward swing. Stand up straight and throw the clubhead with the hands. (Fig. 2.) This will come easy and rather natural, however, if you adopt the habit of leading the clubhead all the way with your hands.

How to Keep Your Eyes at Their Very Best

By Maria Jeritza,

Prima Donna of the Metropolitan Opera Company and One of the Most Beautiful Women of the Day.

BEAUTIFUL eyes are [illegible] eyes. This is not an original remark, but [illegible], it is most important and will bear repetition.

If you would keep your eyes at their very best, get outdoors every day and walk [illegible] resting them on far horizons with a brim [illegible] to protect them from glare. Fill your lungs with fresh air, which transformed into rich pure blood will course through your veins and feed the delicate tissues of your eyes, eyelids, eyelashes and eyebrows.

In order to keep the frame for your eyes [illegible] of your [illegible] condition. Brush your brows and [illegible] each time you brush your hair, using a [illegible] brush.

The natural curve of the brows should be retained. If there are a few wild hairs which stray out of the natural line or go too far down, these can be tweezed. Before using the tweezers it is well to rub cold cream into the skin pore about the roots to open them so that the hairs will pull out easily.

If you will rub vaseline or castor oil or [illegible] of yellow oxide of mercury ointment into your [illegible] as near the roots as possible every night, the chances are, after about three months you will notice results. Your lashes should by that time be thicker, longer and slightly darker than formerly.

As to [illegible] attention to health, including plenty of fresh air, wholesome food and sleep, you can add most to the beauty of your eyes by resting them when they get tired. It is a good plan when you are using your eyes steadily to [illegible] now and then for a moment, and give them a tonic-bath of cold water. I do [illegible] suggest bathing the eyes themselves but bathe your lids and the skin about your eyes.

If your eyes are extremely fatigued [illegible] a [illegible] cold [illegible] water and lying down, place this [illegible] application over your eyes a few moments. Finally, bathe them [illegible] water.

[illegible] Never [illegible] by [illegible] light. Never under any circumstances read on a moving train. A soft [illegible] or green shade and a steady but not dazzling shaded light are best for the eyes.

Just as we enjoy normal exercise for the body, all around exercises for the eyes are also enjoyable and beneficial, as for instance the following:

With your head erect, your eyes wide open, circle your eye-balls ten times to the left, then ten times to the right.

Open your eyes as wide as you can, then close them. Repeat this exercise ten times.

Still holding your head erect and motionless, look as far up and down as you can ten times.

THE WOMAN OF MYSTERY.—Ruth Gray was one of the mysteries of Broadway. She might have been a great artist. But she preferred the shadowy outlets. No one knew just what her game was—except a few, like George Palmer. And they paid her well. She had charm, beauty—brains. But her private life was shrouded in mystery. Palmer greeted her almost deferentially as [illegible] entered his office later.

A SECRET CONFERENCE.—For more than two hours they talked with their heads close together. Palmer had dismissed his secretary and took every precaution that no one should overhear them. Occasionally Ruth looked doubtful and shook her head, offering suggestions. Finally everything was settled and she rose to go. The millionaire scribbled an address on a slip of paper and handed it to her. "That's about all the help I can give you," he said. "You'll have to do the rest yourself." Ruth Gray nodded confidently. "Don't worry," she said. "From now on you can leave everything to me."

HATCHING THE PLOT.—She left Palmer's office with a strange twisted smile playing around her lips. Her first move was to hail a taxi and proceed to an apartment in the Seventies. She was admitted almost instantly by a tall, statuesque woman, quite beautiful in her blonde way, but whose eyes glittered with a cold, speculative air. She greeted Ruth Gray effusively. The girl waved her aside. "Forget the dramatics," she commanded. "I've got a job for you. It will be the biggest thing you ever tackled. Listen . . ."

Theories On Earth's Beginning

By Garrett P. Serviss

Noted Astronomer and Writer on Scientific Topics of Popular Interest

"Laplace assumes that from the nucleus of a nebulous mass which became the sun rings were left off, which were [illegible] into planets, our earth included. On the contrary, Prof. Campbell claims that the earth and the other seven planets had their birth when our sun [illegible] star, when on [illegible] produced [illegible] —M. Levitt.

THE Laplace hypothesis has a unity of design and a logical development that are very [illegible]. It appeals to one's [illegible] one for simplicity of plan. Once set going it proceeds onward like a rolling wheel. It also accords in the most striking fashion with the principal existing facts of the solar system.

But there are certain details that do not [illegible] with recognized mathematical developments in physics, and on account of these many astronomers now reject it and give a more or less complete assent to the opposing theory, which you ascribe to Prof. Campbell, but which in fact was originated by Chamberlin, the geologist of Chicago University, in collaboration with Moulton, the mathematician, of the same university. It is known as the planetesimal theory.

At first view it appears arbitrary and [illegible]. A huge star (other [illegible]) is supposed to have passed near our sun then in an early stage of development and supposedly without an attendance of planets. The effect of the powerful tidal attraction of the passing star, was to produce ejections of matter from the plastic body of the sun, and this ejected matter, streaming out into the region surrounding the sun, condensed into masses revolving in intricate elliptic orbits. Through collisions and fallings together of such masses, the planets are assumed to have been gradually built up.

This is by no means a perfect account of the theory, which is complicated, physically and mathematically and has led to a great deal of discussion and undergone considerable development in detail since it was first set forth.

One of the first objections to the planetesimal theory, was based on the great unlikelihood of such meetings of two suns as the theory assumes. However in view of the immense extension that recent theory has given to the life-time of stars, and of the increasing knowledge of the motions of the stars, this objection does not appear as strong as it once did.

The planetesimal theory would seem more than the Laplace theory, to make of our solar system a very rare, not to say unique, phenomenon. But it must be remembered that, at the best, we are dealing only with speculation. The present fate of the Laplace theory, like that of the former atomic theory, is a warning against putting too much dependence upon even the best accredited scientific hypothesis.

Danger From Electric Current

By Chas. A. L. Reed, M. D.

Former President of the American Medical Association.

THE [illegible] that no one is [illegible] electricity. In cases in which death does not [illegible] the current [illegible] recovery if the rescuer will only [illegible] long enough with artificial respiration.

The first thing to remember is never to touch [illegible] with the hands. Many [illegible] have been caused [illegible] a person who has been rendered unconscious by an electric current and trying to pull him away.

A person in contact is a live wire, and the current must be cut off before he may be touched.

If it is impossible to interrupt the current attempts at rescue may be made with a piece of dry wood or dry rope, but the utmost care must be taken that anything used is a non-conductor.

It sometimes happens that a victim, as for instance, a boy who has been climbing about the roof of a house and has imprudently caught hold of a power wire may be suspended in midair, although quite unconscious, by the tension of his electrically contracted muscles. Naturally if the current is broken he will fall, and so it should be left flowing until some arrangement is made to break his descent.

When the victim has been removed from contact with the current he should be laid on his back and all tight clothing loosened. D'Arsonval, an authority on electrical accidents, has stated that an electrocuted person must be treated like a drowned one. Not a moment should be lost in fussing or examination, but artificial respiration should be commenced immediately.

The best method of artificial respiration, according to Zimmern (Bruxelle Medicale) is that of Schaefer by which it is not necessary to draw out the victim's tongue. This method also imposes far less muscular strain on the rescuer than any of the others.

The unconscious person is simply placed face downward and the head supported by cushions so that breathing is free. The rescuer sits or kneels across his legs, facing in the same direction, places his hands on the lower ribs and presses downward with the weight of his body so as to expel the air from the lungs. He should continue to press and let go in the same rhythm—remember the rhythm—as that of normal breathing. About eighteen times a minute.

Shackled Souls

Author of "Chickie"

Story of a Girl Who Asked That Life Should Pay Her in Full

CHAPTER 35

"IT was good of you to let me stay, Roen."

"Purely selfish. I've a hunger for gay conversation, wolfish as yours for food. As you know, it's less easy to find."

They sat before the fire and argued gaily, knowing the world wouldn't budge from its good and stalwart foundations for all their talk.

Roen grew vivid, now daring, now quiet, rejoicing in Mark's presence.

Mark appeared young, unsettled, seeking. Not arrogant as Geoffrey; not dauntless as Michael.

She thought: "Why do I afflict myself, think they are alike?"

She glanced at Mark's face for a trace of resemblance and found his eyes turned with question and yearning on hers.

"They are alike!" she admitted with hot anguish.

And Mark thought: "I shall never dare to tell her. She would send me away. She would never see me again."

Home again, he walked restlessly back and forth in Claire's pallid living room. He kicked over the rug and thought: "Gray, colorless thing! Anemic thing!"

He summoned Roen for conferences on any excuse he could grab. He learned when she left her office and fell in step with her.

She liked these meetings, liked the chuckle that greeted any absurd idea she now found it delightful to express.

She would not think of his personal affairs, though she gathered from views he expressed an accurate picture of his life.

She would not consciously think of him at all.

But sometimes as she worked, his voice, slightly hesitant, came murmuring to her ears. She found herself recalling his laugh; oftenest of all, his eyes turned with wistful yearnings to hers.

At night when she would be combing out her hair, and Michael's picture confronted her, she would look at it quietly, refusing to admit that she was now seeing a resemblance that made her heart ache and flame.

Once, a week passed when she did not see him at all. All Friday she was conscious of waiting—hoping—expecting a phone summoning her to his office. It didn't come. She was shocked by the depth of her disappointment. Shocked—dismayed—indignant.

Just as she was leaving he called. She didn't notice the hoarse vibrance in his tones. He said, "I want you to come in, if you've time, and sign these papers."

She answered gladly: "Right away!" And felt light—and went out laughing—

Mark kept her waiting. As she entered his office he said abruptly, softly, "I've missed you! Sign these. The boy will soon be yours."

"I'll Drive You Home," Mark Said Gayly to Roen

As she wrote, he got his hat. "I'm going now—right out your way. I'll drive you home. I've been wanting to drop in." He laughed, but watching her intently, ended, "I've been busy."

When they reached the cottage Mark walked up the steps with her. She laughed. "Are you inviting yourself in?"

"Please, yes—I've a present for our child. It's been in my pocket a week."

"Then you can give it to him."

The baby reached out his arms to Mark. When Mark took him, he looked up with an impish scrutiny—touched Mark's face and said: "Da-da? Da-da?"

"Did you hear what he said?" he asked, flushing—trembling—causelessly and profoundly moved.

The belief that Roen guessed and might even share his love now whipped it to a terrible, thrilled intensity.

Saturday afternoon, feeling drained and stilled, Roen walked swiftly along Washington street. She didn't turn when Mark reached her side. She said faintly: "Hello—" and knew without glancing in his face the eager seeking of his eyes.

He said, as though it were a song: "Are you playing golf this afternoon?"

"No. Did my cousin come in to sign the papers?"

"He's coming Tuesday—to talk it over."

"I don't understand, Mark. This sounds ominous. Are you keeping something from me?"

"Not at all. It merely sounds officious and like Frank Mullins."

When she reached Evelyn's flat, she halted with a shock. The front windows had an empty look.

She went heavily up the steps—rang.

Frank Mullins, in his shirt sleeves, opened the door, took the pipe from his lips and stared dumbly at Roen.

"Oh, Ron—hello—wasn't expecting you."

For a moment, seeing the empty room, she could frame no words. Then, smiling faintly, "What's happened?"

"Nothing—thought we'd surprise you all. Had it all planned to spring a big surprise. Thought we'd be all moved and settled before anyone knew what was up."

"Where did you move?"

"Out to Needham."

Roen was conscious of a large, patronizing note in Frank Mullins' speech.

Roen Calls on Mark in State of Great Alarm

"My uncle, Fred, is coming out to live with us. He had us buy this Needham home. Peach of a place, Roen. As soon as we're settled, you bet you'll be the first to spend a week-end. Don't know what Ev would have done if you hadn't come to the rescue when you did.

"Sporty of you to keep the kid all these months. Wait till you see the garden we've got. Greatest place on earth for the kids. Regular paradise.

"Guess you'll be tickled at that, Ron. Guess you were beginning to wonder if I was ever going to get in the clear. Wondered it myself many a night. Pretty tough on a fellow when he's got to let someone else help with his youngsters. You bet I call it sporty of you to keep the babe all these months and never a peep as to when we'd take him back—"

She stood there with her face paling, until she looked like a haggard image made of chalk.

She made a barely perceptible gesture—brushing the mist from her mouth. "It was you and Evelyn who suggested the adoption. YOU—no one else, who arranged it. YOU—no one else, who sent me to Mark Conrad."

"Sure sent you to Conrad! You don't suppose I was handing my own kid over to any one without making sure my rights were protected? Without making sure I could get him back soon as I got squarely on my feet!"

She backed against the door. White—accusing—voiceless.

"Well, if it don't beat all, Ron! Thought I'd give up my own son? Let my kid be raised without a father! Raised by a single woman! Thought that, did you—"

She was conscious of smiling, of saying rigidly. "When do you want him, Frank? Not for a month or so? All right!"

Then, suddenly recalling that Mark would be in his office—calling a taxi—dashing there.

Startled, he opened the door to her frantic knock. She turned to him, white, distracted, reached out her hands blindly.

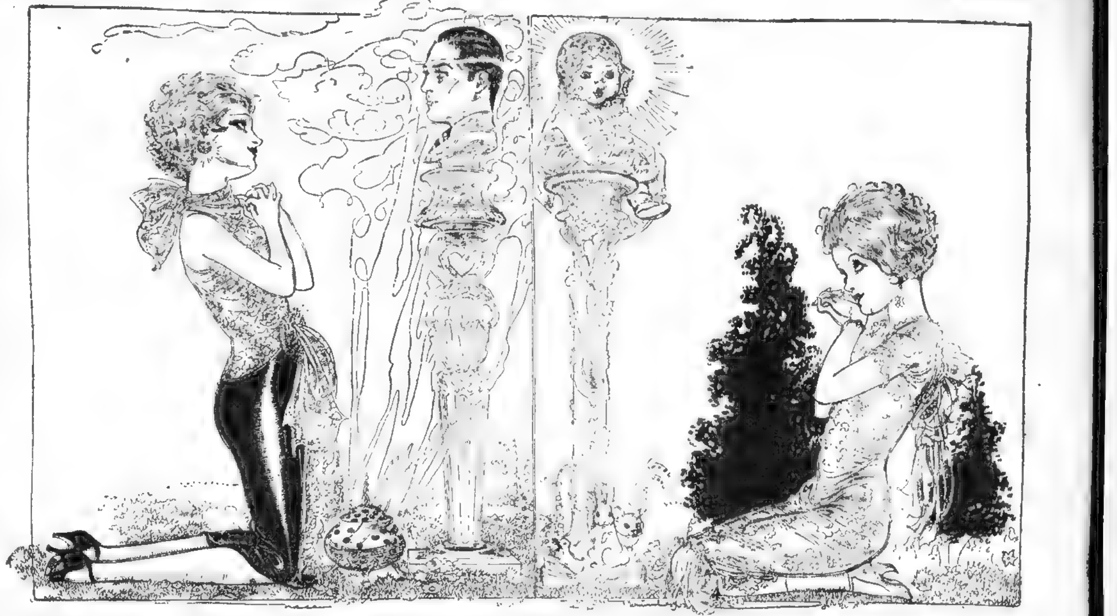
"A Woman Must Worship Something"

DRAWN BY Nell Brinkley



WOMEN have been said to be, beyond men, more pagan than man, quicker to recover from emotion, more religious, blinder in their adoration, more prone to worship.

I really know what I think of all these separate, supposed flaws that we are accused of, but I haven't time to take them up just now. I have a baby to give vegetables, orange juice, beef soup, prune whip and milk to, a new picture to begin, a pair of silk stockings to darn and [illegible] the making of next week's masterpiece [illegible]—so, you see, I will have to leave debate until another day.

But I am proud to admit the first accusation, if by PAGAN is meant "more prone to worship." It is true. Women must worship and adore with unselfish heart some one thing, or slowly dry up and blow away.

[illegible] it is a man. Sometimes this is mistaken worship—for he neither understands nor values it. But, worthy or not, every girl has once worshipped a man.

Then comes her baby. Here we must stop outside the portal of a sacred temple, for the love that a girl or woman has for her little child is beyond a simple journalist's lexicon.—NELL BRINKLEY

"'Curled Hands"; Lord Meldreth Carries Jill Back to Cottage

to be afraid that she was in a very bad way after all. She ought to have come to by now.

He fetched a basin and sponge, because at some time or other she had evidently fallen down in the mud and it seemed rather necessary to clean her up.

He sponged delicately. He had never washed a girl's face in his life before, and wondered if she would object to soap. Soap was much more thorough. It would give the poor girl an awful shock if she were to come to and find herself in such a bespattered condition.

So he used soap; and when that operation was finished he was able to see what the flotsam thrown upon his hands was really like. She had good features, a straight, classical nose, a beautiful mouth with those peculiarly turned-up corners, and a singularly clear complexion. Her hair was golden, and her eyes, when she opened them, would probably be blue. At present they were closed, and her long lashes lay like painted fans against the ivory whiteness of her cheeks. She was dead white now that he had removed the mud—pallid enough to alarm him.

He got some more brandy between her lips and watched the result anxiously, but there was not the slightest sign of a revival. She was still icy cold.

"I wonder what the devil I ought to do!" Meldreth murmured. "It's about time you woke up now, you know—Jill."

Jill evidently didn't think so.

Meldreth knelt down beside her.

"If I only could get you warm," he exclaimed helplessly.

He took up one of the hands that dangled limply over the side of the sofa. It was a soft and very pretty [illegible] and as he touched it, the [illegible] almost imperceptibly curled round his. It was only some sort of reflex action, but the involuntary movement had a disturbing effect upon him.

He was oddly stirred. It was almost as though for the moment he had felt those fingers curl round his heart, sweetly, softly, caressingly. . . .

He spread the hand out in his own palm, as if measuring it. It was a neat hand, a sweet hand. . . . He clasped it again. . . . and again the fingers curled. . . . It was like feeling the petals of a flower slightly moving; and four lines of a verse he had once heard or read somewhere floated back to him, because perhaps they seemed to describe those hands—the little hands of Jill—the one he held now and its fellow, which lay across her scarcely moving breast.

"Oh, he said I had the neatest
hands,
The sweetest in the world, my
hands.
He said that love had curled my hands
To cling about his heart."

But no hands clung around Meldreth's heart. If they did, he unwound them [illegible].

He let go of the fingers . . . and there was that ugly look on his mouth again, the look which seemed to say that, though he would amuse himself as he pleased with the women who crossed his path, he would only love lightly and pass on. . . .

And here was "Jill" still in her faint—a most obstinate, determined sort of faint, the very devil of a faint that was almost like a trance, it kept on so long. He wondered if her heart was weak or affected in any way, if she was healthy and well nourished. He might have understood the duration of that faint better if he had been able to guess at the circumstances preceding it—the long walk and exposure, and nearly a day's abstinence from any food worth mentioning except blackberries.

Meldreth rolled her in the blankets. "Thank heaven, that's done!" he murmured with relief. "Now you'll soon get warm, let's hope."

He drew up an armchair and lit a pipe. He couldn't possibly go to bed and leave her there. There were all sorts of problems to be faced—what to do with her tomorrow, when Parton turned up—what would happen if she still persisted in that trance-like state and never came round at all—what in the name of fortune he was to do if—

He dozed off then. . . . It was the heat of the fire and the lateness of the hour. He pulled himself up with a jerk. He wanted to keep awake if he could.

More logs on the fire. One of them fell out of the log basket with a crash, but the girl gave no sign.

He felt her pulse again. It was no longer fluttering. It was beating quite strongly and evenly. Of course, the brandy had done its work at last, and as she had had a lot, the obvious thing had happened. She had passed from that dead faint into an equally deep and health-giving sleep. [illegible] would wake up as right as a trivet in the morning. . . .

In the meantime, [illegible] as she was sleeping peacefully, it wouldn't matter if he closed his eyes.

He not only closed them, but he slept. He slept for five or six hours, until daylight was in the sky.

His eyes went at once to the girl. [illegible] evidently just awakened, and was sitting up, staring around her, first at the room, then at her blankets, and lastly at Meldreth.

There was a look of amazement in her face, of utter stupefaction; but as she met Meldreth's eyes the corners of that rather bewitching mouth of hers started to quiver mirthfully, and he sensed and was sure that, mercifully for himself, she was endowed with that attribute so comparatively rare in women, the saving grace of a sense of humor.

And the first words she spoke bore out that assumption, for they expressed neither horror, dismay, nor mistrust of himself, only a quaint and amused wonderment at the amazing predicament in which she found herself.

"Oh, Jehoshaphat!" she exclaimed. "Where am I? How did I get here? And—who on earth are you?"

Advice to Lovelorn---By Beatrice Fairfax

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am eighteen years of age. I go about with a college student who is nearly two years my senior.

A few evenings ago, when I called him up to ask him for a favor, he became very rude and began shouting at me over the phone. I hung up.

I am beginning to love him. But after that experience, would you advise me to keep up the acquaintance?

SYD.

IF he was rude to you, he owes you an apology, my dear. Unless he explains or excuses himself, I would treat him as a casual acquaintance. Just a hint, Syd, dear: Girls who do not call up men except on urgent business, run less risk of being treated rudely over the phone.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

Please tell me whether it is right for a girl of seventeen to go with her brother to a public dance. My father is not in favor of this as he feels that I am too young. Is he too strict with me?

Kindly advise me whether it is proper to stay over night in a girl friend's house. My father doesn't sanction that either. I am staying home, doing housework, and taking care of my sick mother, so I have very little outside enjoyment.

ROSE.

YOUR father's judgment is undoubtedly right, Rose, dear, because he understands all the circumstances. You may be sure he has your interest at heart. He places a high value on you. The higher value you place on yourself, the more young men are going to respect and like you, especially the [illegible] Man.

Possibly, your father may permit you to join a very nice evening dancing class where you will meet pleasant, congenial young people or a class in [illegible] I agree that you need [illegible] since you stay home [illegible] deal.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am nineteen and [illegible] much in love with a [illegible] years my senior. [illegible] his love for me.

One evening [illegible] man was calling [illegible] me he loved me and [illegible] sisted, he kissed [illegible] first young man, [illegible] entered the room. Since then he has avoided me and has not given me a chance to explain. Please tell me how I can win him back.

Fads and Fashions

Four Eyes Being Better Than two probably accounts for the revival of the vogue for lorgnettes, which are being used in morning, afternoon and evening types. Those for evening have stone-studded mountings, while the afternoon ones are of white gold in filigree pendant form. Little cases of black enamel, with gaily colored motifs, hold those lorgnettes intended for sports wear. All types affect a pendant style, usually being in locket shape and having the glasses remain part of the pendant section although some pull out so that they may be held separately from the casing.

HONEYMOON

By Mabel Burns

INEZ GRATTON sang softly as she washed the supper dishes. Samuel Milner was coming that evening to take her to the movies, and she was keen both on Sam and the pictures.

When she told her mother she intended going out for a while Mrs. Gratton protested. "Oh! Not tonight! Mr. Abrey said he was coming to call, and you must be at home when he comes."

"Mr. Abrey" repealed Inez. "I do not want to stay and talk to him. Why, mother, He is—well not so dreadfully old, but still ever so much older than Sam."

"Of course he is. He is around my own age. But Inez, a man who is mature and settled is just the kind I have been wanting for you. It would be difficult to find a finer man than Mr. Abrey—he is kind-hearted and generous, and has a great deal of money. He shows his interest in you by coming so often to see us. I know he is not spending his time without a purpose in view, and I was so hoping, Inez, that you would care enough for him to answer the question he will most certainly be asking some of these days."

Inez shook her head. "Oh, mother! I don't want to answer any questions he will ask me. He is a splendid man. I know—rich and fine-looking, but I prefer Sam. We have a better time together."

"Mr. Abrey can give you a beautiful home and the comforts and luxuries you have missed since your faher died. You must accept him Inez. This is just the chance for you. Mr. Bbrey is companionable and dependable, besides being rich."

"That is all true. He is everything you say, mother, but—but—"

Mrs. Gratton said no more. She did not think it wise to urge too strongly, but she felt certain that in the long run her daughter would not refuse the eligible elderly suitor who had been very attentive of late.

When Mr. Abrey called he found Inez, who had donned a pretty frock in obedience to her mother's wishes, at home to greet him

"Sweets to the sweet, Miss Inez!" he handed the girl a large box of bon bons.

"How lovely," she exclaimed, feeling somewhat repaid for remaining at home

"We must keep a smile on lovely young faces mustn't we?" he said jocularly, turning to Mrs. Gratton.

The evening passed slowly for the young girl. Her mother and Mr. Abrey discussed many subjects but it wasn't until mention was made of France and Paris that she began to take interest in the conversation.

"Oh! If one could only take a trip to Paris! It would be perfectly wonderful! I just love to travel!"

"Paris, eh?" Mr. Abrey looked quizzically at the girl. "Well, why not? A trip to France would not be too bad! That is a fine idea of yours, Miss Inez."

"But travelling takes ever so much money." Inez's eyes were wide with incredulity. "We could never afford it, mother and I, and—"

She did not finish, for a sudden thought caused her to flush and glance away. Did he mean—could it be that he had in mind a wedding trip? Ah! A honeymoon spent in France would be an ideal! It could not be improved upon, provided of course—she glanced at Mr. Abrey's partially bald head—provided that the bridegroom was suitable. Sam for instance.

She roused from her day dreams to hear Mr. Abrey and her mother talking vivaciously about the trip. What time of the year France and Paris were at their best: what line was preferable for crossing, and a score of other details. They were having considerable enjoyment and Inez was soon making suggestions regarding this and that. On the whole the evening passed much more quickly and pleasantly than she had expected.

When Mr. Abrey left, he said significantly to Inez. "We will have to see about that trip. It must be taken before very long too! I am glad that you thought of it!"

The next evening Mr. Abrey and Sam Milner arrived simultaneously at the Grattons' home. Sam eyed the elder man with distrust and disfavor. He was suspicious of his intentions and feared he would lose Inez—that the other's wealth would weigh against his youth and inexperience. Mr. Abrey greeted him cordially and when the young man proposed that Inez attend the moving pictures with him, suggested that they all go.

Later on, when Mr. Abrey said "good-night!" he beamed on Inez. "I am overjoyed to think you are liking me better," he said. "We are going to have that trip to France for sure, are we not?"

This time it was Mrs. Gratton's turn to blush and become confused, but she said nothing until they were alone and Inez broke out with: "He presumes too much! I have not said I would have him. I am not sure that I will, not even for a trip to Paris."

"You will not need to, Inez," Mrs. Gratton replied softly. "I found out tonight that I had made a mistake. Mr. Abrey's visits were intended for me, and he was doing his best to please you so you would like him, and not object to our being married."

For a moment Inez was speechless, then she gave vent to her feelings in a loud "Hurrah! And we are to have the trip to France after all. It will be your honeymoon, and maybe ours, too, for Sam —well, Sam talked of such things as weddings and all like [illegible] tonight as we walked home."

RADIO DIALOG

by C. WILLIAM RADOS

Do listeners realize the debt they owe concerns sponsoring broadcasting? The public most emphatically does not, and to make it more emphatic it complains whenever it gets a chance.

The public buys motor cars, phonographs, bookcases and canned salmon. Yet no one gives them gas and oil and tires and roads to use with automobiles. The public pays for them. No one gives away free phonograph records, books for the bookcases, or can openers to get your salmon out after you have paid for it. The public pays for all those things.

Yet once the first installation is paid on a radio we expect free programs all the rest of our lives. And not only must they be free, but when we send in a request for "The Old Swanee River" we want the announcer to read our name so Susie and the family will hear.

Broadcasters and sponsors spend much money, time and effort on securing programs which will be attractive items and inoffensive.

Since they are paying they have a right to want their names advertised. Yet care must be used or the audience will feel imposed upon.

It is true that the amount spent by listeners on private radio equipment would pay ten times over the cost of operating all the broadcasters in the country.

Yet listeners must realize that without radio advertisers, the greatest stars of the musical world would be unknown to them. Presidential speeches would not be heard except by a few thousands, and broadcasts from great baseball and football events would not be.

Do not kick too hard.

Sees Crops Grown by Radio

Hartford, Conn., June 20—Crops of enormous size made so by high frequency electric energy dissipated from many powerful transmitters, were mentioned as a possibility by Admiral W. H. G. Bullard, chairman of the Federal Radio Commission, at the open-air service of Trinity College's 101st Commencement program.

THE MEDITATIONS OF A WIFE

By HELEN ROWLAND.

SOUTHERN men! Tall, lithe, lank, slender, with beautiful profiles, charming manners, and a fascinating accent.

The stronger vessel, filled with applesauce!

Men who still retain the mid-Victorian, "There-there-I'll-take-care-of-you-little-girl" attitude!

Never openly impertinent—and always easily squelched.

Men with a few fragments of old-fashioned ideals about women, and a still fresh and enthusiastic interest in the love-game.

Mostly "marrying-men"—a type which is almost extinct in some localities.

Men who say "Doggone!" instead of "Damn!" before women, and never tell smoking-room stories or talk of "sex" in the presence of nice girls.

Deferential to old ladies, delightful pals, incorrigible flirts, wonderful escorts—but not HALF so romantic and impressionable as they pretend to be!

New York men!

Snappy, exuberant, sophisticated and always beautifully groomed!

Not half so cynical as they would have you think they are!

Men who know how to "do things" properly—order a dinner, get a taxicab in a storm, take you to the most interesting places, get the best service, dance any old thing, and bluff their way, anywhere.

Men who have a limited English vocabulary but a magnificent command of the latest slang, and a beautiful canned "line!"

Awfully good-natured men—but fatally unreliable!

Men who tell you, tonight, that you're "the only woman in the world"—and almost MEAN it—and forget your first name and your telephone number, tomorrow.

Magnificent spenders, unblushing "show-offs," hard-boiled business men, fast workers.

The sort of gentlemen who prefer blondes.

Clean-looking, solid-looking, eligible-looking men!

The kind you could safely take home and introduce to your mother.

Men who send you flowers, remember their dates with you, and are always on time for an appointment.

Men who have "that married look."

YOU know what I mean—the Typical American Husband. The kind who gets up and puts the ice in the refrigerator, lets the cat in and the dog out, starts the coffee percolator, mows the lawn, keeps his hair cut, keeps up the insurance, and comes home to dinner every day!

All-American men!

MEDBURY SAYS---

By JOHN P. MEDBURY

COSMETIC importers claim that American women used over a billion dollars' worth of European powders and paints last year. This shows that our girls don't go in much for local color.

THEY want rosy cheeks that bloom in Paris.

SEVENTY-five percent of their blushes come from abroad.

A DOLLAR stick of rouge is a wonderful investment.

IT starts paying dividends after the first kiss.

EYES are the windows of the soul, and you have to be careful how you trim the windows.

NATIONAL POLICIES OF THE HEARST NEWSPAPERS

1. An agreement of English-speaking peoples to preserve peace among themselves and promote the peace of the world.
2. A constitutional amendment to provide for the election of United States Senators in numbers proportionate to the population of each State, but no State to have less than two Senators. A reapportionment of Congressional representation immediately after every census, or in case of the failure of Congress so to act, to make the apportionment automatic at the end of the first Congressional session, the proportion of population for each representative in each case to be that of the existing Congress.
3. A separate Department of the Army, of the Navy and of the Air Forces, all united under a Secretary of National Defense.
4. Federal action to the limit of Federal Government powers to abolish illiteracy among the people of the United States, and the creation of a Secretary of Education.
5. Necessary measures to secure the election of Congress in November and its installation on the 1st of January following, and the inauguration of a President on the 1st of January immediately following his election in November.

One Who Knows

"Aggie's" New President

In Dr. Roscoe W. Thatcher the trustees of the Massachusetts Agricultural College appear to have found a president for the institution at Amherst whose appointment cannot help but please progressive farmers.

Born on a farm in Ohio, Dr. Thatcher lived in one of the small towns of that State until he was 13, when the family removed to a prairie farm in Nebraska. Working his way through the preparatory and collegiate departments of the State university, he was graduated in 1898. A summary of the positions he has filled since that time shows that he has seldom got far away from the subject of agricultural chemistry:

Assistant chemist, then chemist and eventually director, Nebraska Agricultural Experiment Station.

Instructor, assistant professor, professor of agricultural chemistry and head of the Department of Agriculture, State College of Washington.

Professor of agricultural chemistry, and head of the Department of Chemistry, in the College of Agriculture of the University of Minnesota.

Dean of the Department of Agriculture and director of the Agricultural Experiment Station of the University of Minnesota.

Director of the State Agricultural Experiment Station at Geneva and of Cornell University Experiment Station at Ithaca, New York.

The tendency has been for State agricultural colleges to drop the "agricultural" from their titles as speedily as could be. They become State "colleges." The professors find this "more inviting to the young." It may have been, twenty years ago or more, but if there is anyone today who is ashamed of being a farmer we do not know where to find him.

Dr. Thatcher for more than a quarter-century has been devoting his knowledge, his talent and his energies to the task of making American farming more scientific and more profitable. Bringing him to the State Agricultural College we believe to be one of the best things that has been done recently for Massachusetts farming; and so, in a broad way, for Massachusetts industry. We hope it may be a long day before any other State takes him away from us.

A $2,000,000 Hotel

Portland's

The only complaint we ever heard about the hotels of Portland, Me., is that upon occasions there have not been enough of them. Throughout the vacation period and again in the Fall, particularly during the music festival, the only way to be certain of a bed in the Portland house of your choice was to "telegraph ahead."

Three hundred and sixty additional rooms will not take care of EVERYONE who may want to visit Portland, but the opening of the beautiful new Eastland has relieved the situation to that extent, at least.

Governor Brewster, felicitous as always, was one of the speakers at the banquet which opened the house. Another was the dean of Maine hotelmen, Hiram W. Ricker, of South Poland.

Twelve stories high, of brick and limestone, the Eastland represents an investment of $2,000,000. A Danish room, an Egyptian room and the Spanish ballroom are some of its features.

Such an expression of faith in Portland and in Maine is bound to be encouraging to the business men of the community, make them confident of the future.

Make a note of the new Eastland, but if you are going down at the height of the season remember that it may be just as well to telegraph a request for reservations.

The "Military" Virtues

As the Boss of the Marines Names Them

At Norwich Military Academy's 108th Commencement, Major-General John A. Lajeune, commandant of the United States Marine Corps, paid tribute to the "military virtues."

Which ARE the military virtues?

General Lajeune designated "a few" of them as:

INDUSTRY.
FIDELITY.
COURAGE.
UNSELFISHNESS.
THE SPIRIT OF SELF-SACRIFICE.

"I am in no sense a militarist," declared the commander of the world's most famous fighters, "but I believe with all my soul that what we are taught to consider as MILITARY virtues constitute the very foundation of character building and are essential to right living, whether our careers be within or without the military service."

Well, if we could call them the AMERICAN virtues, as well as the military virtues, we could cut our police establishments in two, reduce taxes 50 per cent. and put a lot more fervor into our community singing of "Hail Columbia, Happy Land!"

With Lindbergh and Lajeune for good examples, we might at least determine to AIM high, anyhow.

Soaring

Much Better Than Hiking

Boston pedestrians will be interested in a London invention to facilitate walking. It is now worn by our English cousins hiking across the fields. Maybe we can adapt it to city use.

A small balloon is attached to the person, with a lifting power almost equal to the person's weight. The process of walking is thus made similar to the dancing of a butterfly from flower to flower. Men and women cover from fifty to seventy feet at one leap, nonchalantly skipping over hedges, bushes, fences and brooks.

It might be a convenient way in Boston to get through street crowds. Escaping crooks could use the device to gallop from roof to roof, with a balloon detachment of sky police plodding after them.

FOURTH LARGEST U. S. INDUSTRY

By DR. FRANK CRANE

THE fourth largest industry in the United States is a business that was not in existence a quarter of a century ago.

It is the moving picture industry and now represents an invested capital of $1,500,000,000.

This warrants us in looking ahead and in surmising that one of the greatest businesses in the world in the next twenty-five years is practically unheard of at present, so rapidly do things grow in America.

In casting about for the reasons why the motion picture industry has grown we find it has become so great because it appeals to a fundamental want of human nature.

It is the acme of amusement and there is nothing that people want more than to be amused and nothing they are willing to pay more for.

It appeals to the whole people. It requires no education nor particular outstanding intelligence to appreciate it. High brow and peasant alike are attracted.

Those kinds of business which attract many littles have a firmer foundation in prosperity than the business that appeals to a select class.

The money from the postoffice dribbles in in very small quantities, yet it is a tremendous concern.

An industry which attracts millions of people in three or four audiences a day and keeps this up day in and day out for the whole year has immense possibilities.

The motion picture business is not a fad, for it rests upon real human want. It is the ideal entertainment. It does not require the use of language and you are saved the difficulties that come from imperfect hearing.

Anybody can understand pictures and indeed the effort of words is to make a mental picture. In motion pictures you have the image without the medium of words.

Beginning in amusement the motion picture will go into all other avenues. It is of use to illustrate surgical operations. Its possibilities in scientific instruction are great. In the teaching of history and geography in the schools it enters upon a field as yet unscratched.

It has been the best advertiser for America that has been found, for it popularizes American life and makes the whole world familiar with it.

It is being recognized as one of the chief agents for promotion of international goodfellowship and, like commerce, its effect upon world politics will be irenic.

WORDS OF THE WISE MEN

It is the nature of a great mind to be calm and undisturbed and ever to despise injuries and misfortunes
—Seneca.

He that defers his charity until he is dead, is, if a man weighs it rightly, rather liberal of another man's than of his own.
—Bacon.

Society is now one polished horde,
Formed of two mighty tribes, the bores and the bored.
—Byron.

BOSTON DAY BY DAY

UNIQUE

A RARE type of porcupine—wholly black—was recently killed in STOUGHTON by MRS. MARY HUMPHREY. Unlike the usual American species it had none of the usual yellow hairs in its pelt. The animal had been about MRS. HUMPHREY'S country estate for more than a week before being despatched.

PLANNING

NEWTON is planning to celebrate its 300th anniversary in 1930 in a fitting manner by throwing open the doors of a new City Hall. Whether the structure should be built in WEST NEWTON, where the present City Hall is located, or in NEWTON CENTRE is a question that is causing the city fathers much concern. HENRY I. PARRIMAN, chairman of the Metropolitan Planning Board, is an ardent advocate of the NEWTON CENTRE site. His opinion is bound to carry no little weight when the final decision is made.

Friends of FREDERICK D. RANKIN of 36 COMMONWEALTH PARK, WEST NEWTON, are advising him to place a certain five-cent cigar in his possession in a glass case and put it on exhibition in some museum. Rankin recently found $1,200 in bills on HIGH STREET, BOSTON, and when he returned the money to the owner, that grateful personage presented him with the now famous "stogie."

ON THE JOB.

JOHN T. SHEA, superintendent of the CAMBRIDGE HOME is a former president of the Boston Catholic Total Abstinence Union. Under the administration of Mayor John H. H. McNamee he was superintendent of streets in Cambridge. His knowledge of men and habits makes him a valuable asset to the citizens of the University City in his present position.

AT LAST

MAYOR QUINN of CAMBRIDGE knows what it is to be advertised to throw the ball at the opening of a baseball game. For six consecutive days he was billed to appear at Russell Field to open the series in that city for "Dan" Leahy's Twilight League, and on each occasion HIZZONER had to forgo that pleasure because of postponement on account of the weather. In the interim he had been practicing and when the time came to stand in the spotlight he proved his mettle amid the plaudits of the rooters.

LISTEN, WORLD!

By ELSIE ROBINSON

BE Kind—Yes, I know—people aren't kind to you. People often do mean things to you. Nevertheless, even though it is only for your own selfish profit, be kind. For consider what hardships you wish on yourself if you are anything but kind.

Hate, for instance. Hate stirs you and sets you working for revenge. Hate keeps you counting your grudges and seeking fresh food for scorn. Hate takes all our time and strength. Why, hate does you a hundred times as much harm as one miserable mortal could possibly do to you.

Or sitting in judgment on folks. That's another bad bet. Takes all the joy out of life. You can't possibly be natural if you're going to judge people. You can't be a little lazy or silly or extravagant or given to fibs. You must be perfectly good and wise and strong—or at least make yourself believe that you are—before you dare to judge others. Or, if you do slip, you must spend all your time inventing grave, solemn excuses and alibis to prove that you are Heaven's little pet. Judges must spend all their waking hours trying to bluff themselves, their fellow men, or God. Which is my idea of a total waste of time.

"Well, I don't exactly hate people or sit in judgment on them," you say. "But I've certainly got a mighty low opinion of most of them and I'm determined to have nothing to do with them."

"A low opinion"—Yes, I admit there's plenty of reason to have a low opinion of your neighbor. If you'll analyze any life you'll probably find 57 varieties of cussedness in it. But there's this disadvantage to the Cynic's role—two disadvantages in fact. First, what good does it do you to go around harboring low opinions of people and looking for the worst in them? Does it sweeten life for you or comfort your grief or make you stronger for your own grim fight? What do low opinions buy you anyway?

Moreover, remember that when you expose the cussedness in your neighbor you also expose the cussedness in yourself. Nature lined us all with the same brand of tripe.

And as for leaving folks alone — that listens well, but somehow it won't work. Indifference is a lonely job. We think we can do without people, but we can't. There's something lacking in a solitary life. Not just the touch or sound of other humans, but something vital that should pass from man to man. A sort of spirit that keeps us all alive. When we cut off from that sap our hearts go cold—we wither in our husks like dried up seeds.

So, take it any way you want, kindness is the only 100 per cent. working technique. It relieves you of an infinite amount of responsibility and distress. It protects you from endless irritation—it is the perfect armor. And it opens your life to all that is happy and helpful in life.

HOW DO YOU KEEP SO COOL YOUNG FELLER?
BY BEING KIND
ELSIE ROBINSON
6-20

Try it when you come to the next hard jam. Instead of hitting back, or walking away with your nose in the air or giving way to suspicions or sitting in judgment, just try being kind. Don't be a Pollyanna. Don't gum up the works with a lot of sentimentality. Don't try to save your enemy's soul or insist that he slap the other cheek. Just treat him as if he weren't your enemy at all—casually, cheerfully. Then, after the fracas is over make an audit of your emotions and see how it compares to rackets in the past.

THE RHYMING OPTIMIST

By ALINE MICHAELIS

FOR long I watched the golden stars last night wax brighter as the darkness grew more deep, and as they flowered on their celestial height across the weary world crept welcome sleep. The stars are very far and passionless, as calm and cool as lights of heaven must be, and yet their glow streams down like a caress across the strife of being's restless sea. Beneath their beauty every woe must wane, no sword of sorrow but their gleam will dull its edge: they take the keenest pang from pain and all man's grief to lesser grief they lull. Last night I watched the stars for hour on hour and deep into my soul their message crept, their tranquil mood of purity and power, until, at last, peace claimed me and I slept.
